Lehman to Run For Copeland's Place in Senate

Executive to Race 'If Party Desires'

Farley Non-Committal; Labor Party Booms Hillman in 'Deal.'

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Almost immediately, Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., declared he would be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Lehman's announcement, telephoned to the executive office from his summer home at Purchase, Westchester County, shortly after the funeral for Senator Copeland, said:

"If my party desires me to be a candidate for the office of United States Senator to succeed Senator Copeland, I will accept the nomination."

Bennett Backs Lehman.

Bennett's quickly forthcoming statement read:

"Gov. Lehman has made a great Governor. He will make a great Senator, too. The Democratic Party will honor itself when it nominates him for United States Senator. I am for him 100 per cent. In view of the Governor's announcement, I am a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor of New York State."

It is known that the Governor told Postmaster General James A. Farley that he was going to announce his Senatorial candidacy. Farley, who is chairman of both the Democratic National Committee and the Democratic State Committee, had only the following comment to make when reached at his home last night:

"Gov. Lehman has a perfect right to announce his candidacy for the nomination for United States Senator. Of course, it will be up to the convention to decide."

Farley Knowledge Assumed.

Since Lehman attended the funeral of Senator Copeland at Suffern, N. Y., along with Farley and other leading Democrats of the State only a few hours before announcing his candidacy, it was assumed that he made his statement with the knowledge not only of Farley but of the White House.

Benson Takes Lead of 9,202 In Minnesota

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, June 21.—Gov. Elmer A. Benson tonight pulled into a slightly increasing lead over Hjalmar Petersen on the Farmer-Labor ticket in the State primary election as more than three-fourths of the returns were tabulated.

Benson had a lead of 9,202 from returns of 3,058 of 3,739 precincts. The vote was, Benson, 183,775; Petersen, 174,573.

It was by far the most surprise-packed gubernatorial primary in Minnesota history.

Petersen, who defied Benson and the party he inherited from the late Floyd B. Olson, fought single-handedly a party in control eight years.

While Benson is an ardent New Deal supporter and champion of labor, Petersen, a member of the State Railroad and Warehouse Commission, has adopted a comparatively conservative stand by de—manding the ouster of "Communists" from within the party and advocating stimulation of private enterprise.

In the Republican column Harold Stassen, young Dakota County attorney, of St. Paul, led with 108,020 on the basis of 3,058 precincts. Others stood: Martin A. Nelson, Leach, Minneapolis, 50,301; Harson Austin, 63,386; Mayor George E. Northrop, Owatonna, 2,887.

Thomas Gallagher, of Minneapolis, held the lead among Democratic aspirants with 19,394 votes in 3,058 precints. Others were Fred Schliplin, St. Cloud, 16,587; Michael Murry, St. Cloud, 14,812; V. Anderert, St. Paul, 3,913, and J. Anderson, Minneapolis, 2,778.

Portland, Me., June 21 (AP).—Gov. Lewis O. Barrows' avalanche of votes, which buried State Senator Roy L. Fernald's bid for Republican gubernatorial nomination, stood at nearly 50,000 tonight.

Virtually complete returns in yesterday's primary gave Barrows 72,830, Fernald 24,387. The Barrows lead was more than double the 19,000 majority by which he was nominated two years ago over Blin W. Page, Skowhegan banker.

Summer Arrives In D. C., Bringing Cool Rain, Clouds

Summer officially came to Washington last night at 9:04, but no one, for the immediate present at least, need worry about it, because:

The Weather Man last night said he was pretty sure that summer's innaugural would be greeted by overcast skies, occasional rain and temperatures moderately cool.

Yesterday was the longest day of the year. Starting today the sun will rise later and set earlier, but for the next several weeks the change will be barely appreciable, the difference being a matter of seconds.

Jury to Indict More Nazis as U.S. Air Spies

Heads of 2 Ship Lines, Member of Secret Police Involved.

A number of executives and employes of two big German steamship lines and a member of the Gestapo, German secret police organization, are expected to be indicted by the New York grand jury investigating a foreign spy ring that was prying into the secrets of America's air forces.

The grand jury, which Monday indicted 18 persons, including three German government officials, will thus strike at those held responsible for the flight of several important defendants and witnesses in the big espionage case.

From confidential sources it was learned that the indictment of 18 persons in New York was only the beginning of a drive which is expected to bag spies representing at least one other nation.

Sought Air Secrets.

Virtually all the evidence in the case of the German agents indicates they were after secrets of the Army and Navy air services. This country leads the world in effective military aircraft.

One of those under arrest was an Army private of German birth stationed at Mitchel Field. Two other suspects, one of them under arrest and the other a fugitive in Germany, worked in American airplane factories.

The foreign nations which have sent spies swarming to the United States do not necessarily expect a war with this country. They want its secrets to be better prepared for any war.

Not only are the spies after the plans and specifications of existing American war planes, but also those projected for the future.

The war colleges abroad have heard that Uncle Sam is planning a bomber so big that it will have to be shot into the air from a catapult, a plane capable of carrying huge loads of explosives 2,500 miles, dumping them, and returning to its base without landing.

So far, it was learned on good authority, the important Army and Navy aviation secrets are safe.

No Embassy Involved.

It was also authoritatively stated that none of the foreign embassies in Washington is implicated in the spy investigation. As a matter of fact, it was added, the naval and military attaches of embassies and legations have access to much of the data which spies have been risking their necks to procure through undercover methods.

The investigation which resulted in the wholesale indictments in

Threat to Kidnap Barbara Hutton's Son Is Reported

London (Wednesday), June 22 (U.P.).—The Daily Mail said today Scotland Yard officials had been informed of a threat to kidnap the young son of Countess Curt Haugwitz-Reventlow, the former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth 5 and 10 cent store heiress.

Scotland Yard officials, the newspaper said, rushed instructions to detectives on duty at seaports and airdromes, asking them to watch for arrival of a person suspected of making the threat.

Heading the Army officers was Maj. Joseph N. Dalton, whose headquarters are at Governors Island. It was he who questioned Gunther Gustave Humrich, an Army deserter of German blood, among whose papers was found incriminating military information.

Rumrich's arrest led to the arrest of Johanna Hofmann, red-headed hair dresser on the German liner Bremen, and courier of the alleged spy ring.

Maj. Dalton, who has been turning over all of his information to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is a graduate of the Virginia Military Institute. He entered the Army as a second lieutenant of Infantry in 1916.

G. O. P. District Attorney Delays Turning Over Evidence to Board.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 21.—Pennsylvania's attorney general served notice upon the Dauphin County district attorney today that he would supersede him in the investigation of graft charges made in the primary campaign against the Governor and others high in the administration and Democratic Party.

Attorney General Guy K. Bard, who contends he has the authority under State law, made the demand in a brief, heated court session conducted by visiting Judge Paul N. Schaeffer, given by the Supreme Court full power to consider all pleas for the investigation and decide whether to permit it.

District Attorney Carl B. Shelley, a Republican, refused to step out immediately and Judge Schaeffer adjourned court until Monday without ruling on Bard's request that the judge order Shelley to turn all evidence over to him.

The attorney general pointed out that Gov. Earle charged Shelley with political motives in seeking to conduct the inquiry.

The Supreme Court yesterday, in putting the case back into the Dauphin County Court under Judge Schaeffer's control, refused the Governor's plea that the inquiry be banned because evidence cited in the charges was "framed."

Bethesda Posses Hunt Assailant of Policeman's Wife

Approximately 300 Bethesda (Md.) citizens organized last night in a search for a colored man who attacked Mrs. Doris Day, slight brunette wife of a Montgomery County policeman. Posses included a half-dozen women in riding breeches.

Mrs. Day, who is 28, was knocked to the ground while she was walking on Georgetown road near the Bethesda firehouse. The man darted from the bushes and tripped her, she said.

First policeman to reach the scene after her screams had drawn a crowd from the nearby business section and had frightened the attacker into the bushes was her husband, Leo Day.

As word of the attack spread through Bethesda, volunteer firemen, police and citizens organized themselves into posses and combed the surrounding countryside for the assailant.

Late last night four men had been arrested and were held at the Bethesda police station.

Spanish Pact Reached.

By Joseph Driscoll.

London, June 21. — The British plan for the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain and the granting of belligerent rights to both Spanish factions, was indorsed in detail by envoys of the principal European powers, meeting today at the foreign office with Lord Plymouth, chairman of the sub-committee of the non-intervention committee.

The document as finally agreed upon by Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Soviet Russia, will now be submitted to all the 27 European powers concerned in the non-intervention pact, who will have to pass on it at a full meeting of the committee. Their acceptance is being taken for granted, since European affairs are being more and more dictated by the "Big Five" powers.

The next step will be to approach both the Barcelona and Burgos governments and obtain their consent to the dispatch of two neutral commissions of experts to Spain to count the number of foreigners fighting on each side. This work, it is hoped, will be done within a period of 30 days or 45 days at the outside.

Belligerent rights are to be granted when "substantial progress" has been made toward evacuating foreign volunteers. In the case of Gen. Francisco Franco "substantial progress" has been interpreted to mean that he must retire at least 10,000 of his Italian and German helpers. The Barcelona government, having fewer foreigners on its side, will be called upon to muster out a proportionately smaller number.

As a preliminary to all this, additional observers will be placed on

Presbyterians Hit Roosevelt's Use of Liquor at Nahant

Russellville, Ark., June 21 (AP).—The General Assembly of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church today censured "the serving of champagne after the Roosevelt-Clark wedding because of the exemplary nature of every act of the Chief Executive of the land."

The criticism was made in a report by the committee on temperance and law enforcement which the assembly adopted unanimously.

Finance Minister Seihin Ikeda was represented as anxious to appease American opinion by a general increase in cash purchases and to be ready to ship more gold to the United States.

Allen 'Begs' Ride To See Roosevelt

District Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday hitched a ride part of the way to Hyde Park to help present President Roosevelt with a check for $1,010,000.

Two years ago Allen left good clothes and money at home and posed as a jobless itinerant on a Nation-wide tour to learn relief conditions first hand.

The Commissioner "bummed" his ride yesterday dressed to be received at the summer White House and accompanied by Keith Morgan, chairman of the President's Birthday Celebration Committee, and Thomas Wrigley, publicity director.

They were en route to attend ceremonies marking presentation to Roosevelt of money raised by the birthday balls January 30 and by an appeal for dimes to aid the drive to wipe out infantile paralysis. A tire blew out on the Albany Post road and they thumbed a ride to Poughkeepsie, where they took a taxi. Allen said a lot of cars went by before one stopped.

Morgenthau, Eccles Agree On Bank Plan

Feud Ends in Compromise on Examinations to Loosen Credit.

By Robert C. Albright.

Full agreement on liberalization of bank examination regulations was reached yesterday after a "give and take" session between the Administration's highest credit authorities.

Major policy differences between Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board were compromised at a three-hour interdepartmental conference. Another meeting was scheduled today to polish off details.

Morgenthau had given Eccles and the Federal Reserve Board until tonight to subscribe to uniform bank examination rules already approved by the Treasury, Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. In an ultimatum Monday, he said these three agencies were defending the "interest of depositors."

Both Give Ground.

Eccles, who has sought further liberalization and "modernization" of banking restrictions to stimulate bank loans and investments in industry, won certain concessions at yesterday's meeting, but neither he nor Morgenthau would go into details.

"I don't think it is advisable to make any statement at this time," said Eccles. "The report, after it has been acted upon by the White House, will speak for itself."

Morgenthau said they had "arrived at a report through the usual democratic processes of give and take."

Announcing that all four of the agencies now are in agreement, he said the report will be submitted to the President when he returns tomorrow and it will be "up to the White House" whether it is made public.

He called it "a very constructive move."

The Treasury Secretary's more conservative views are believed to have predominated in the report, with the backing of Chairman Leo T. Crowley, of the FDIC, and Acting Comptroller of the Currency Mar-

Rail Chiefs Call Unions to Pay Parley; July 1 Cut Delayed; Borah Urges Slash in Bond Interest.

On the Business Fronts.

Business is not and has not been as bad as many people have believed, President Roosevelt said yesterday, and the prospects for business this year have definitely improved.

Railway executives called for rail union leaders to meet with them in Chicago June 28 to negotiate toward a settlement of the dispute over the proposed 15 per cent wage cut.

Senator Borah called for rail bondholders to accept a drastic slash in interest to assist the roads in their present financial difficulties.

Securities were given a brisk boost in the most active stock trading in 12 weeks as Wall Street took a more hopeful view. See Page 21.

Rail Wage Parley.

By William V. Nessly.

The tense struggle between railroads of the country and their million employes over a proposed 15 per cent wage cut yesterday brought a call from the roads for a joint conference between the two groups.

The carriers' joint conference committee, composed of 15 railroad executives from all sections of the country and acting for management, invited the 19 national rail labor organizations to a meeting at Chicago June 28 to discuss the 15 per cent pay cut which the roads have warned would be put into effect.

Pay Cut Postponed.

The call for a conference was interpreted as postponing automatically the wage reduction, which had been set for July 1, in view of likelihood that negotiations will be long drawn out.

This development came simultaneously with appointment of a House sub-committee of the Interstate Commerce Committee to conduct a study of the desirability of legislation to reorganize transportation and co-ordinate regulation as between competitive transportation agencies.

Chairman Lea announced that the sub-committee would be composed of Representatives Crosser, of Ohio; Martin, of Colorado; Cole, of Maryland; Boren, of Oklahoma, all Democrats, and Mapes, of Michigan, and Wadsworth, of New York, Republicans.

At the same time, Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, called on railroad bondholders of the Nation to agree to a drastic slash in interest charges in order to assist the railroads through present financial difficulties.

Roads Fear "Disaster."

The carrier executives' call for a conference, it was understood, followed statements of union heads throughout the country to individual roads that they desired that negotiations on the issue be handled by a national conference.

H. A. Enochs, chief of personnel of the Pennsylvania road and chairman of the Carriers' Joint Conference Committee, in announcing invitations to the Chicago meeting, issued a statement citing figures on income, costs and labor's pay on the roads to support the carriers' position that the pay cut is essential to avert "disaster."

He said:

Spending Bill Signed.

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 21.—President Roosevelt signed the $3,750,000,000 lending and spending bill today and asserted that business is not and has not been as bad as a lot of people believed it to be.

At the same time he announced he would deliver a fireside chat to the Nation from Washington at 9:30 p. m. (E. S. T.) Friday.

He told his press conference the talk would be general and would be broadcast over all major radio networks.

Informed persons expected him to discuss, among other things, the lending-spending bill and probably other phases of his program enacted by Congress.

Commerce Report Noted.

The President gave as backing for his statement on business a Department of Commerce estimate that the national income for this year would be slightly above $60,000,000,000 Earlier Government estimates were $55,000,000,000.

The President was asked if he thought business had scraped bottom in its downward trend.

By request, he let the following reply be quoted directly:

"As somebody remarked the other day, there have been a few raindrops coming from the heavens, and possibly they will be followed with a much-needed shower."

He parried a question as to when the shower would come.

Work to Start in 60 Days.

With a sheaf of papers in his hand as notes, he said:

First—Dirt would fly on $350,000,000 of Public Works Administration projects within 60 days, now that the big $3,750,000,000 bill has been signed.

Second—The prospect for business during 1938, based on national income figures for the first three months of the year, was definitely improved. The President added his assertion that business is not as bad as some people believed applied to both industry and agriculture.

Third—He had signed 45 bills and vetoed 7 since coming to his Hyde Park home, and would act on 10 more before he went to bed tonight, but still would have 337 to pass upon after that.

Mr. Roosevelt also took occasion to say that references to the last Congress as a $12,000,000,000 Congress were ridiculous in view of the fact that a large portion of the money appropriated was for loans which the Government would be repaid.

Moreover, he added, the sum under discussion represented in part authorizations for which no appropriations had been made.

On international affairs, he asserted that he could say no more than that he had talked of general

Press Lauded for Safety Aid; The Post Is Called Outstanding

By Howard F. Wentworth.

New York, June 21.—Confusing traffic regulations and the wide lack of uniformity in basic rules of the road were attacked here today by nationally known highway safety experts as the Commercial Investment Trust Seminar of Safety opened its second annual session in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Safety articles appearing in The Post this year and last year were displayed to the seminar group as sessions opened this morning.

Clews in Creek Mystery Fail; Teeth Still May Identify Girl

A Staff Correspondent.

Prince Frederick, Md., June 21.—Hope of tearing aside the mystery that shrouds the death of a woman found in Lyons Creek near here Monday appeared tonight to depend on four small bits of dental gold.

Calvert County authorities have asked Dr. H. M. Walters, Prince Frederick dentist, to make an effort to learn if four crowns, one on each of four bicuspids, bear numbers which might reveal their origin. Dr. Walters explained that dentures made in laboratories outside a dentist's office bear such numbers.

Should this effort prove unfruitful, Arthur W. Dowell, State's attorney, said solution of the mystery would hinge on the possibility, more or less remote, that some one who knew the woman intimately would make a personal identification. Efforts to take fingerprints were thwarted. Private H. C. Carl, Maryland State police identification expert, said the woman's fingers were so badly shriveled by water and decomposition had progressed so far they could not be printed.

Hague Shut Off In Attack on C. I. O. Counsel

Judge Blocks Testimony Involving 'Integrity' of the Court.

By the Associated Press.

Newark, N. J., June 21.—Presentation of charges that Mayor Frank Hague abrogates free speech and assemblage in Jersey City ended in Federal Court today with the mayor seeking in vain to make another attack on C. I. O. Counsel Morris L. Ernst.

On his feet in the jury box, the tall and lean vice chairman of the National Democratic Committee was silenced by Judge William Clark.

"Judge, I would like to be permitted to make a public statement involving Mr. Ernst," said Hague, pointing at Ernst among the C. I. O. and American Civil Liberties Union lawyers pressing an injunction suit against Hague and fellow officials to restrain them from interfering with those organization's activities in Jersey City.

Court Integrity "Involved."

Ernst, accused by Hague of instigating a C. I. O. Communist plot to seize control of the United States, smiled at Hague's protest.

"Not from the witness stand," Judge Clark cautioned Hague.

"It involves the court," Hague went on. "I have proofs, I have records * * * I submit myself to examined by everyone and I feel very much disappointed if I am not not permitted * * * it involves this gentleman (Ernst) and it involves the integrity of this court."

"No," said Clark, "you will have to offer it through your counsel in evidence. You must confer with your counsel first."

Judge Present at Parley.

An authoritative source said Hague sought to discuss a conference between opposing counsel at start of the trial, at which efforts were made to agree to a proposed injunction restraining the alleged acts complained of by the plaintiffs.

Hague's reference to the "integrity of this court," this source said, meant only that the conference was held in Judge Clark's presence and in his chambers.

As the plaintiffs rested, court was adjourned to Thursday when arguments will be heard on several legal points, including the validity of blanket subpenas issued by Jersey City counsel on high C. I. O. and A. C. L. U. officials.

Ernst filed with the court today an affidavit supporting his motion to have Hague held in contempt for issuing to newspaper men during a recess last Friday a statement the court had ruled out of the record.

Hague's statement charged Ernst stopped a New York legislative committee investigation of reports of radical influences in the public schools of that State.

Action on the contempt charge was held in abeyance pending filing of briefs by Ernst and answering affidavit and briefs by Hague's lawyers.

Pittman Predicts Drastic Changes In Neutrality Act

By the United Press.

Drastic revision of the neutrality act to provide new safeguards for American interests and nationals abroad will be projected at the next session of Congress, Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, revealed last night.

The disclosure coincided with reports the United States and Great Britain are discussing possibility of parallel economic action against Japan in event the latter attempts to exclude Anglo-American interests from conquered sections of China. Pittman, however, indicated the plan has no relation to the neutrality program.

He said he and other members of his committee, in co-operation with the State Department, will study problems arising from the Sino-Japanese and Spanish wars as they might apply to the neutrality act, principally embargoing of American-made airplanes to belligerents who use them to bomb civilian populations.

Tax Suit Over Sale Of Harding's Paper To Supreme Court

By the Associated Press.

A tax dispute growing out of the sale by President Warren G. Harding of his interest in the Marion (Ohio) Star reached the Supreme Court yesterday.

The Brush-Moore Newspapers, Inc., owner of the Star, filed an appeal challenging a $3,350 Federal income tax deficiency assessment for 1930 and 1931.

Part of the contract for sale of the paper provided that an agreement would be made whereby Harding, after he left the Presidency, would be employed as editor for 10 years at $13,300 a year.

In the event of his death, the money was to be paid to Mrs. Harding, or to his estate.

The President died in California in August, 1923. The money was paid to Mrs. Harding until her death in 1924. In 1930 and 1931—the years at issue—it was received by Mrs. Abigail Harding Lewis, one of Mr. Harding's sisters.

The newspaper sought to deduct from its income tax the amount paid Mrs. Lewis on the ground that it was an ordinary and necessary expense. The Board of Tax Commissioners declared, however, that the payment was part of the price of the President's interest in the paper. The Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals sustained the assessment.

WILLIAM H. SAVIN.

Family Service Association Investigated Nearly 6,000 Appeals for Aid Last Year, But Could Help in Only 4,000 Cases, Director Says.

By Christine Sadler.

In proportion to its size, the Family Service Association of Washington receives more calls for help than any other privately supported welfare agency in the country.

This is because the whole District relief picture is out of joint and public funds have been wholly inadequate to meet the situation, according to William H. Savin, F. S. A. director, who, as a member of the Citizens Committee on Unemployment, has worked for two years to get Congress to make a larger relief appropriation.

With a staff of but twelve case workers and three supervisors, the Family Service Association last year investigated 5,972 applications for aid. Due to lack of funds, there were 1,823 cases to whom no aid could be given and 1,653 for whom the help was partial. The time of four case workers was tied up entirely with intake conferences—although almost 2,000 of the cases needed only economic relief and were, therefore, not F. S. A. cases in the strict sense of the word.

Oldest Welfare Agency.

In its fifty-eighth year, the Family Service Association is the largest and oldest family welfare agency in Washington. For many years it went under the name of the Associated Charities.

In addition to its family service work, the F. S. A. operates two summer camps in the Chopawomsic Recreational Area. Twenty different agencies, including settlements and the Juvenile Court, select the boys and girls who are most in need of the two weeks of progressive education which the camps provide.

Although applications of the agencies total around 2,500 this year, only 900 can be accommodated. One hundred mothers will be accommodated and can bring with them children under 5 years of age. Children between the ages of 7 and 12 go to Chopawomsic unaccompanied.

$7,000 Needed for Camps.

Approximately $7,000 must be raised this summer if the full two months are to be insured. The association is a Community Chest agency, but is operating the camps under a decreased appropriation.

Savin hopes to see the day when summer camps will be considered a definite part of the school program. He says $8.50 will keep a child in one of the F. S. A. camps for a whole week.

Savin became director of the Family Service Association four years ago, going to the position from the Department of Labor. He is a native of Delaware, and before coming to Washington he served for 5 years as budget secretary of the Community Chest of Philadelphia. He works at a driving pace and can cover a vast amount of ground in one day. Recently, he has taken up golf—just because he felt he needed a more definite form of exercise than he was getting. The Savins live at 3822 Veazey street northwest and have three children.

On Friday—Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian, Washington Public Library, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

On Capitol Hill

Rayburn, Leaving for Home, Doubts Special Session; Woodrum Disputes Leader.

The ranks of Congressional leaders still on Capitol Hill was further diminished yesterday with departure of House Majority Floor Leader Rayburn for his home in Texas. The main body of representatives moved out promptly after adjournment last Thursday night.

RAYBURN.

Rayburn was inclined to scoff at the possibility of a special session being called this fall. On the other hand, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, expressed the belief President Roosevelt would call the legislators back for rail and possible other legislation.

Raisins, peaches, cane sirup and prunes were assured to many persons on relief yesterday when the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation announced programs to purchase surplus supplies of the four foods.

Cane sirup production last year was about 2,500,000 gallons above that for 1936. The FSCC purchases are limited to 250,000 gallons.

In addition up to 15,000 tons of surplus raisins are being bought to relieve the market. The supply for the 1937-38 marketing year amounted to 300,000 tons, or 24 per cent more than for the previous season.

And dried prunes to the amount of 31,174 tons, will be bought for those in need. Supplies of dried California prunes on hand September 1 of this year are expected to be the heaviest for years.

A purchasing office where offers of Georgia peaches are being received has been set up at Macon, Ga. Production of about 16,131,000 bushels of peaches is expected in ten Southern States this year, which would be 31 per cent above the 1937 production.

The George W. Goethals Memorial Commission will meet here today in the offices of Gen. John J. Pershing to consider a design for the memorial to the builder of the Panama Canal. Congress has authorized appropriation of $160,000 for the monument, to be erected within the Canal Zone.

Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, was recently named to the commission by President Roosevelt. Other members are Gen. Pershing, chairman; Col. John Callan O'Laughlin, publisher of the Army and Navy Journal, vice chairman; Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas; Swagar Shipley, Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, chief of Army Engineers, and Brig. Gen. R. E. Wood, U. S. A., retired.

The commission recently reported to Congress a survey of sites had been undertaken and that the commission felt the Cristobal Mole site, near the Caribbean Sea entrance to the canal, was the most desirable.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or show worry—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

U. S. 'Frontier' Here, CCC Aide For Area Says

America's frontier no longer is out West but "right here, all around us," Dr. Thomas G. Bennett, CCC educational adviser for the Third Corps Area, declared yesterday.

Charges of "militarization" of CCC campers are unfounded, Dr. Bennett said, adding that the "military education" amounts to little more than disciplined housekeeping and "straightening shoulders."

Citing the unemployment problem as an example of "the new frontier," Bennett said the CCC was helping conquer this type of wilderness by training boys in fields where there is a demand for labor, such as radio operation, acetylene welding and airplane mechanics.

Bennett, whose area includes the District, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia, is one of nine corps area educational advisers attending a five-day conference at the office of education, Department of the Interior, under chairmanship of Howard W. Oxley, director of CCC camp education.

He said co-oporation of the District Board of Education in providing vocational instruction for youths in the four District CCC camps had been "tremendously helpful."

"The various communities might as well co-operate in this effort, just as Washington has done," Bennett added, "because they would have to to take care of these boys anyway."

At the morning and afternoon conferences yesterday, the educational advisers and representatives from the Department of Agriculture, Labor, War, Interior and the Veterans' Administration, conferred on problems of overlapping and duplication of personnel, methods of selecting CCC boys and methods of finding jobs for them.

Gov. Marland Asks Roosevelt to Shun Oklahoma Primary

Oklahoma City, June 21 (AP).—Gov. E. W. Marland said today he had urged President Roosevelt not to visit Oklahoma until after the July 12 primary, "because I am making a campaign for the United States Senate against Senator Thomas."

He also said he had asked the President not to express a choice in the race for the Democratic nomination, sought by Marland, Thomas and Representative Gomer Smith. Marland scouted reports Roosevelt might indorse Thomas.

The Governor said that if Roosevelt should visit Oklahoma before the primary he would ask the President to meet equally every Democratic candidate for Congress and the Senate, "for the good of the party."

Roosevelt Losing, Hamilton Certain

Birmingham, Ala., June 21 (AP).—John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, forecast today "President Roosevelt will be a candidate for re-election in 1940 and will be defeated."

Coming here to address the Alabama Republican convention tomorrow, Hamilton said Roosevelt "will be an easy man to beat, because his program can't possibly work out."

U. S. Protests Bermuda Bill as Discriminatory

By the Associated Press.

The State Department called Great Britain's attention yesterday to a pending bill in the Bermuda Parliament which it said would discriminate against American ships.

The department instructed the American Embassy in London to say that this Government hoped the bill would not be enacted.

The Governor General of Bermuda, in a message to the Bermuda Parliament, specifically mentioned the Eastern Steamship Line, of American registry.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt Control of Congress No Index of Popularity, Surveys Show.

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, June 21.—The fact that President Roosevelt regained his political control over Congress in the closig weeks of the session has been construed by some political observers to mean that the President has enjoyed a similar gain in popularity throughout the country.

George Gallup.

Surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion show, however, that Roosevelt's popularity with voters bears no close relationship to the actions of Congress.

Actually, his popularity during the closing weeks of the session, when he was winning spectacular victories in Congress, was the lowest in two years. It was considerably lower than it had been earlier in the session, when the President was suffering major defeats on Capitol Hill.

At the time of the victorious passage of the wage-hour bill, for example, the Institute found his popularity index 54.4 per cent. This was nearly 3 points below the figure reported during the fight over the reorganization bill. This, although the defeat of the bill was hailed as a body blow to his prestige, a substantial majority of voters throughout the country were still for Roosevelt.

Court Fight an Example.

The fight over the Supreme Court bill last year also illustrates that the fate of a specific measure is not an index of the President's popularity. The Court plan was shelved by the Senate and was opposed by nearly 60 per cent of the voters. Yet a majority of these same voters indicated, in an Institute survey, that they were still for Roosevelt.

A year ago Congress voted the President down on the wage-hour bill. At that time his popularity was nearly 6 points higher than it is today. Not until the Lister Hill election in Alabama and the recent Florida primary did Congress change its views on wage-hour legislation. Yet Institute studies have shown that the public has favored such legislation for almost two years.

Decline Since October.

The Institute has found that the President's popularity began to decline last October, coincident with the beginning of the business slump. It fell from 63.4 per cent in that month to the present figure of 54.4 per cent. The decline continued steadily, regardless of the Administration's good luck or bad luck in Congress. With the President preparing to take a swing across the continent early next month, it is possible that his popularity will rise again. The next Institute report, scheduled for mid-July, will show the trend.

Security Men Vote SEC Aid in New Regulation

The Investment Bankers Conference, Inc., largest group of investment bankers and over-the-counter security dealers, yesterday voted to create a national association and register with the securities and exchange commission under the Maloney act, passed by the Seventy-fifth Congress.

At a meeting at the Carlton Hotel attended by the I. B. C's governing committee and the advisory council, a special committee was appointed to consult with the SEC and report its recommendations to the conference.

It is learned that the I. B. C. probably will evolve into the proposed national association with its code of ethics for membership, as provided by the Maloney act. Regional associations also will be organized.

After discussion of the Maloney bill the conference voted to offer "heartiest co-operation" to the SEC.

16.9 Billion Set As 1937 Costs Of Government

Conference Board Report Covers All Divisions; Less Than in 1936.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 21.—The national industrial conference board today made public results of a study estimating total 1937 expenses for all divisions of Government at $16,900,000,000, including $400,000,000 Social Security expenditures.

This represents a reduction under the board's revised estimate for the fiscal year 1936, which was $17,047,000,000, an increase of $2,116,000,000 compared with 1935. The 1936 total, however, includes Federal expenditures relating to the soldiers' bonus amounting to $1,873,000,000 and Social Security expenditures totaling $29,000,000.

The board reported a continuous increase in total Governmental expenditures form 1923 to 1936 fiscal years inclusive, with the exception of the fiscal year 1933, when reduced State and local expenditures brought down the total.

On a percaptia basis, the expenditures increased from $79.96 in 1923 to $132.77 in 1936, the report said.

Federal, State and local tax collections, the report said, reached a new high level of $10,498,000,000 in 1936. The total for 1937, including social security taxes or contributions, was $12,300,000,000, the board estimated.

The ratio of tax collections to realized national income was 16.5 per cent for 1936, compared with 17.5 per cent for 1935.

The gross debt of all governments in the United States amounted to $55,600,000,000 on June 30, 1937, the report added.

Loans on Wheat May Be Held Up

Agriculture Experts Feel Weather, Rust May Reduce Surplus.

Faced with the second largest winter wheat crop on record, and diminishing prospects of a good export market, Agriculture Department experts were watching the weather yesterday on the chance their 761,000,000-bushel June estimate might yet prove excessive.

This Administration's first crop loans on wheat, which could have been ordered on June 15 prices, may be postponed until the July crop report weighs the full effect of rust damage now indicated by leavening prices.

The farm act provides for loans to wheat farmers when the farm price June 15 is less than 52 per cent of the parity price, or when the July crop report shows production larger than normal consumption and exports. Loans, expected to average over 60 cents a bushel, would enable wheat farmers to store their surplus until prices improve.

Start Granary Plan.

Coupled with the new wheat-crop insurance, the loans provide the first practical operation of Secretary Wallace's "ever-normal granary" plan, in which reserves of wheat are stored under Government loan and wheat is paid by farmers as crop insurance and used to pay off losses in poor-crop years. This year's towering surplus will pay two years' insurance premium in advance.

Departmental authorities pointed out that if the June 1 crop report holds and wheat prices fail to strengthen materially, surplus-laden farm co-operators have another ace in the hole in the $212,000,000 farm price parity appropriation carried in the relief bill.

Approximately $53,000,000 will go to wheat farmers, payments possibly starting late this year after 1939 compliance plantings have been checked.

Export Hopes Dashed.

With this year's wheat production running to 80,000,000 acres, and 1,200,000,000 bushels in supplies threatened, there appeared little doubt Secretary Wallace will hold next year's acreage to a 55,000,000 minimum.

Hopes that a lively export business might cut supplies diminished yesterday with reports that the European wheat crop, thought damaged, may be larger than last year's 1,420,000,000 output.

Senator McGill (Democrat), Kansas, said last night that farm legislation enacted by the last Congress was "among the greatest assurances that this country can have of a resumption of recovery."

D.C. Aides Start On Estimates For '40 Budget

Municipal bureau heads yesterday began preparing their budget estimates for the 1940 fiscal year.

District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, District budget officer, said he had been requested by the Federal Budget Bureau to have complete estimates for the District 1940 budget by September 15. He said he would allow municipal officials until August 15 to prepare their estimates.

That will give the District Commissioners a month to fit the estimates to anticipated revenue.

The auditor is preparing a financial statement on condition of the District treasury as of the end of this fiscal year and the probable situation, according to available data, at close of next fiscal year. This is intended as a guide for the Commissioners as well as department heads, to be used in preparation of estimates.

District officials have feared estimates would not be ready for submission to the Budget Bureau by September 15, inasmuch as two new District Commissioners will have taken office by that time and may want to proceed slowly.

Senator Copeland's Friends Pay Final Tribute

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

State's Attorney to Seek Quick Indictment of Maryland Man Today; Brown Hears the Verdict in a Stolid Silence.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Md., June 21.—Armed with a strongly worded coroner's jury verdict that Fred Brown, 48-year-old farmer, murdered his young wife, State's Attorney Gorman Hill said tonight he would press tomorrow for a special grand jury to hear the case.

Hill said he planned to confer tomorrow morning with Judge T. F. Insley on the possibility of recalling the April term grand jury.

While Brown sat in stolid silence and with calm countenance, the jury brought in a verdict that the farmer, "deliberately and maliciously" strangled his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Brown.

Confession Cited.

The latter, 17 years old, was soon to have given birth to Brown's second child. Hill said Brown confessed killing her and throwing her body into the Nanticoke River, after weighting it with four plow points. He said his wife had threatened to take their infant son and leave him after a quarrel.

Brown did not testify at the hearing, but was represented by James A. McAllister, former State's attorney of Dorchester County.

Neighbors Testify.

Testimony that Mrs. Brown stayed at their home the night of June 13 after asserting "Fred wouldn't let me in," was given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sackett, neighbors of the Browns.

Arrayed before the jury for inspection were the four plow points bound to Mrs. Brown's body, tennis shoes and anklets she was wearing, and pieces of her print dress.

The jury's verdict read:

"We find Mrs. Elizabeth Brown died of strangulation at the hands of her husband, Fred L. Brown, who deliberately, maliciously and of malice aforethought did strangle Elizabeth Brown to death.

Lunches for Needy At Summer School Assured by Board

Noon lunches for needy children of this summer's vacation school became a certainty, and for those of the regular school term next fall a probability, when board of education members yesterday voted co-operation with a WPA project.

The board voted support in a special poll of members.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent, said plans for the lunch project had been completed last week at conferences between school officials at Mrs. Mary Steele, director of the WPA division for women's projects.

The WPA will furnish a case worker to investigate needy children and a supervisor to take charge of the vacation school lunches.

The school board agreed to contribute $240 covering "telephone service" for the summer period and next winter, and also 5,736 square feet of space for the preparation of lunches.

The public school summer term begins July 5.

Montgomery Jury Indicts J. R. King In Embezzlement

James R. King, former assistant to the Clerk of the Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville, was named yesterday by a special grand jury in four indictments charging embezzlement of a toal of $666.15.

The indictments were brought in connection with shortages in the county dog license accounts.

The first indictment contained 20 counts of embezzlement, the first 19 of which were $1 each. Two other indictments charged embezzlement of $10 each in connection with the issuance of licenses to owners of dog kennels. The last indictment charged shortage in accounts of $627.15 from August 12, 1935 to October 1, 1937.

About two months ago King was indicted jointly with his superior, Harry M. Williams, on a charge of embezzling a total of $1,076.

Posing as Brother For Auto License, Man Gets $25 Fine

Fraternal affection cost Clarence Mayfield, 22, of 1907 Capital avenue northeast and his brother, Robert, 19, considerable embarrassment and a fine of $25 apiece in Traffic Court yesterday.

Robert went home last week and told his brother he had failed the road test he had taken in hopes of getting a driver's permit.

Clarence, according to testimony yesterday before Judge Hobart Newman, resolved to present his brother with a permit as a "surprise." He went down to the Traffic Division, presented himself to Policeman Thomas E. West as Robert Mayfield and took the test with distinction.

A series of questions resulted in charges of misrepresentation against Clarence, Robert, and Winston L. Stewart, New York chauffeur who accompanied Clarence during the test. Stewart was found not guilty. Clarence and Robert were given the alternative of a $25 fine or 15-day jail terms.

Brawl Trial Waits For Convalescence

A hasty exchange of hostilities, allegedly involving a night stick and a revolver, failed to bring order out of chaos at the "45" Club, 45 H street northeast, on May 16, and brought the hostile parties into Police Court yesterday.

Held for action of the grand jury were Herman Bowen, 26, colored, 1212 Duncan street northeast, and Rupert Crockett, 26, colored, a special officer at the club. Both were charged with assault with a dangerous weapon.

According to testimony before Judge Walter J. Casey, Bowen became incensed when Crockett attempted to oust his woman companion from the club. Bowen snatched Crockett's night stick, police say, and broke it over the special officer's head, whereupon Crockett shot Bowen, inflicting a wound in his side.

The case was held up for a month pending Bowen's recovery. Judge Case set his bond at 1,000 and Crockett's at $300.

Ex-Washingtonian Gives Up to Police, Returns to Prison

Lowville, N. Y., June 21 (AP).—John Jacobson, 39, of Croton Point, was back in jail today after 10 years of freedom because he gave himself up to police to clear his record so his three children—born after a marriage since his escape—would not grow to know their father as a convict.

Jacobson was sent to Great Meadow prison at Comstock to serve out the 16 months that remained on his term when he escaped.

Jacobson was serving a 2½-year sentence on an assault charge when he escaped in 1928.

He started a candy store in Washington, D. C., in 1931, later sold it and went to Indianapolis.

Leonardtown, Md., June 21.—The body of Mark Colton, 26, of 702 F street northeast, Washington, was found floating in Breton Bay near here today in almost the same spot where Colton toppled into the water from the stern of a fishing boat Sunday.

Goebbels Stirs 120,000 to New War on Jews

Speech Renews Waning Drive; Defies Opinion in Other Countries.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 21.—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels tonight put the stamp of official approval on the new wave of Nazi anti-Semitism and roused a crowd of 120,000 Berliners to hysterical cries of "out with the Jews—out with the Jews."

At the annual summer solstice exercises at Olympic stadium, Goebbels demanded, however, that the state party rather than "the street"—meaning mobs—attend to solution of the Jewish problem.

He said that though he had "a full understanding of the fact the Berlin population is taking measures for its defense, I do not approve of the method.

"But it is a good thing we know what concerns are Jewish," declared the small propaganda minister referring to the recent smearing of store-fronts with "Jew" in red paint.

Called a Nuisance.

"Just let the Jews clean their stores—now we know where their businesses are.

"We will see to it that legal measures are taken so that soon Jews will have gone altogether.

"As far as those remaining are concerned let them remember to keep out of the public view. They are beginning to be a nuisance . . .

"If the foreign press invokes our human feelings, why we will be glad to present the Jews to them.

"If people say 'Why, the Jews aren't doing anything,' I say they provoke us by their very presence.

"What do we care about foreign countries, anyway. The world should leave us alone; we are not harming anybody."

At this point a bellowing voice from the audience introduced the word "Sudeten," referring to the Germanic minority within Czechoslovakia.

Says They Are Tormented.

Goebbels took up the word.

"We won't tolerate any longer that 3,500,000 Germans (in Czechoslovakia) are being tormented. Austria has shown what could happen . . .

"All we want is peace, but not the peace of the graveyard."

The minister's virulent attack came as the open campaign to drive some 500,000 Jews from Germany had shown signs of abating.

But postoffice officials announced a new anti-Jewish measure. They stated Jewish business houses no longer could avail themselves of the convenience of bringing mail such as advertising circulars to postoffices for mass stamping and cancellation except in cases where the addresses were Jewish.

Yesterday's order forbidding the presence of Jews on stock exchange floors was reflected in a drop in business today.

With "Aryanization" in full progress, the Jurdische Rundschau turned the attention of its Jewish readers to the problem of emigration and saw hopes in possible action by the governments co-operating with the United States in an international refugee meeting at Evian, France, July 6.

Turkey, League Break On Alexandretta Voting

Geneva, June 21 (AP).—Turkey broke off relations today with the League of Nations committee controlling elections in the Syrian district of Alexandretta, which lies along the Turkish frontier.

Turkey charged the committee had failed to maintain "impartiality" in the registration of voters.

Powers Accept Britain's Plan To Isolate Warfare in Spain

London

the French and Portugese frontiers with Spain, and in nine Spanish sea ports to tighten control of smuggling and keep out materials and men.

The census of foreigners in Spain, permitted by Burgos and Barcelona, may lead to a temporary truce in the fighting, according to London optimists. In any event, the British government intends to work for an armistice whenever it thinks the time is favorable.

Armistice Move Rumored.

[Meanwhile, it was rumored in Paris that the French ambassador in Barcelona, who returned to his post today, already was sounding out the government of Premier Juan Negrin on a plan for an armistice, the United Press reported.—Editor's note.]

The British plan for giving Spain back to the Spaniards had been approved by the French, Italian and German governments prior to today's meeting. Only Soviet Russia had opposed the British scheme and it yielded tonight in a spirit of compromise and under pressure from its ally, France.

Russia continues to be a stumbling block on the question of financing the work of the nonintervention committee. Millions of dollars will be required to take the foreigners out of Spain and ship them home, and to pay for the observers and census takers of the committee. Russia refuses to bear an equal share of the expense with the other leading powers, on the ground that she has no nationals battling in Spain and she sees no reason why she should shoulder the cost of shipping Italians and Germans home however desirable such one-way travel might be.

Russia's objections will be considered at a further meeting of the sub-committee next Friday.

Britain "Expects" Bombing.

London, June 21.—With his former foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, sitting on the sidelines as a silent accuser of the present British foreign policy, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain confessed to a crowded House of Commons today that his mighty nation is powerless to prevent aerial bombing of British ships in Spanish ports, and further that such attacks are to be expected as long as the war lasts.

The Prime Minister experienced a very uncomfortable afternoon. The labor spokesman, P. J. Noel-Baker, said Chamberlain's policy could be summed up in the words "by gad, sir, it is high time we warned Gen. Franco that if he sinks another 100 ships British we shall retire from the Mediterranean altogether."

Former Prime Minister David Lloyd George shook hands with Noel-Baker and denounced the Chamberlain policy as cowardly.

Willie Gallacher, the Communist M. P., shouted across the floor at Chamberlain, "what is your Navy for? Is is only for review by the King?"

"Not Nice," Chamberlain Says.

"It is not a nice thing to hear of British ships being attacked in Spanish ports," Chamberlain said sadly. "As far as I know there is no foundation for any suggestion that these ships have been carrying arms of munitions. They have, of course, been carrying food, coal, oil and other stores, and no doubt that is the reason they are being attacked.

"We have not admitted the right of Gen. Franco or anybody else to attack these ships. What we say is that we do not see any practical means of preventing it without adopting a policy which would be completely at variance with what we believe to be in the true interests of this country."

The prime minister rejected as impractical and dangerous proposals that Britain should cut off trade with Franco; that it should impound whatever money Franco has on deposit in England; that it should recall the British agents from Burgos and that it should supply Barcelona with antiaircraft guns.

Calls Peace Only Solution.

Ironic cheers from the opposition greeted Chamberlain when he continued, "We have left Gen. Franco in no doubt as to our views. A number of times we have protested against the bombing of open towns and villages and later against the bombing of British ships, especially where it seems to us the bombing was deliberate . . .

"The one satisfactory solution of the Spanish question would be the termination of the war. That would put an end to all these difficulties at once."

Early in the debate the Commons was stirred by whispers, "Eden's arrived." The former foreign secretary slipped in quietly and took a third-row seat directly behind his arch-critic, Lady Astor, and only 15 feet away from the prime minister.

Eden Blushes.

Eden was suntanned and refreshed and smiling. He was dressed informally in a loose gray suit and blue shirt.

Eden was noticed to blush and shake his head in contradiction as the prime minister insisted his government had not betrayed Eden's principles of foreign policy.

Lloyd George declared Chamberlain's statement involved a complete reversal of British policy as laid down for generations. He said Chamberlain's government was behaving like a "bevy of maiden aunts who had fallen among buccaneers."

Trenches Dug in Rock.

On the Eastern Front With Government Troops Near Nules, Spain, June 21 (AP).—Thousands of workers hewed formidable fortifications out of solid rock north of Valencia today while government troops fighting stripped to the waist under a boiling sun held off insurgents in heavy fighting around Villarreal and Burriana, 35 miles up the Mediterranean coast above Valencia.

Machine gun nests and artillery bases protected by thickly strung barbed wire were blasted out behind broad trenches that would trap enemy tanks.

Gestapo May Let Schuschnigg Go Into Italian Exile

Vienna, June 21 (AP).—A high Austrian official said today the Gestapo (state police) investigation of Kurt Schuschnigg was almost completed and that the former Chancellor of Austria might be permitted soon to go into exile in Italy.

It was understood that Premier Mussolini pleaded with Reichsfuehrer Hitler to spare Schuschnigg, who has been detained by the Nazis since the annexation of Austria March 13.

De Valera Wins A Majority of 16

Dublin, June 21 (AP).—Prime Minister Eamon de Valera matched his 1932 record of 77 seats in the Dail Eireann (House of Representatives) today on final election figures, which gave him an absolute majority of 16.

Final returns of the June 17 balloting gave the following distribution of seats: De Valera's Fianna Fail Party, 77; W. T. Cosgrave's Fine Gael Party, 45; Labor, 9; Independent, 7.

Japan Shifts Armies to Dry Anking Sector

4 Divisions Already There, 20,000 on Way for New Hankow Drive.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), June 22.—Japan's flood-ruined campaign for quick conquest of central China is being reshaped at heavy cost to challenge steadily growing Chinese strength.

Troops and equipment are being shifted at great expense from the flooded Lunghai zone, where only two weeks ago Japanese were on the verge of capturing Chengchow, and Chinese said four Japanese divisions were being concentrated near Anking, in Anhwei Province, for a push due west against Hankow. An additional 20,000 men and 200 tanks were said to be on their way to Anking from the Lunghai area.

Hankow reported Japanese troops had reached a point 130 miles east of Hankow, around which 60 new Chinese divisions numbering 500,000 men were reported digging in for the coming battle for the city. Chinese also said they were receiving new shipments of planes and Russian tanks and guns.

Japanese gunboats based on Anking were shelling their way up the Yangtze River toward Hankow. Ninety Japanese vessels were said to be concentrated in the Anking area.

In the flood area, clearing weather brought hope of subsiding water. All foreigners at flood-marooned Chengchow were safe, according to a telegram received at Hankow from one of them.

Friction over use of mission properties in Japanese-occupied centers increased. Thirty American doctors and nurses filed with the United States consul general, Frank P. Lockhart, a petition asking that the American Government protest to Tokyo against "continued unnecessary and purposeful interference with foreign rights and interests in the Japanese-occupied central China area."

Canton (Wednesday), June 22 (AP). Japanese war planes killed at least 30 persons today in a raid over Wongsha, a suburb of bomb-scarred Canton.

Welles Hails Constitution as World's Guide

Most Vital Force of 19th Century, He Avers at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, June 21.—Standing in the shadow of Independence Hall where the Nation's Constitution was written, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles said today the document was "unquestionably the most vital force in the advancement of human liberties during the nineteenth century."

He spoke in Independence Square at ceremonies climaxing a four-day celebration of that day 150 years ago when New Hampshire ratified the Constitution and made the 13 colonies a nation.

Welles said, "We here within this country can keep alive and unimpaired the right of human liberty bestowed upon us in the Constitution." He called for an endeavor, "before it is too late, to bring about a new observance of the principles of international law and humanity upon which the cotinuation of modern civilization depends."

"Subversive propaganda both from the right and the left is afflicting all nations, including our own," he said.

"Today, we confront a sadly troubled and tragic world. International law is being increasingly violated; the sanctity of international obligations is being increasingly disregarded. Cruelty to human beings which would have been incredible even a decade ago, is accepted in some parts of the earth as a matter of course."

The civil rights guaranteed by the Constitution, Welles said, "form the great safeguard that we, the American people, today possess."

"To preserve them inviolate is our high responsibility, and the opportunity which we are afforded to demonstrate to a shaken world that democracy is still its hope."

O'Mahoney to Speak.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, who will probably head the joint congressional administrative monopoly and price-fixing inquiry, will speak at a luncheon at the National Press Club tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. O'Mahoney will discuss the plans for the investigation.

U.S. Policy Means 'Lives for Dollars,' Charge of Pacifist

The reported plan for the United States and Great Britain to prevent Japanese interference with their trading rights in China was said last night by Mrs. Florence Brewer Boeckel, associate secretary of the National Council for Prevention of War, to reveal that the "strong" policy which the State Department says it intends to follow in foreign affairs is "a policy for the protection of commercial interests."

"If the sympathies of the American people for the Chinese people are played upon to lead them into a war in Asia, it is now clear that, whatever the slogans, it will not be war to save China for the Chinese," Mrs. Boeckel added, "but a war for commercial interests in which American lives will be sacrificed to save American and British dollars."

President Offers Hungary as Model To Debtors of U. S.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

President Roosevelt is considering sending a special message to Congress early next session urging acceptance of the Hungarian war debt payment proposal as a model for settlement with other nations, it was learned last night.

A usually reliable official said that the Hungarian plan, which provided for payment of the original principal without interest over a period of years, has met with the approval of Mr. Roosevelt and high Administration officials, and that the Chief Executive tentatively plans to carry the issue to Congress.

Mr. Roosevelt is represented as favoring acceptance of the plan as a "trial balloon" to test public sentiment before attempting to actively negotiate compromise settlements with other nations.

Mellon Tax Suit Settled by U. S. For $668,000

$3,000,000 Case Simmers Down in 4 Years to No-Appeal Pact.

By the Associated Press.

The Government's $3,000,000 income tax case against the estate of Andrew W. Mellon simmered down to a $668,000 settlement yesterday.

The agreement brought to an end four years of litigation which saw the former Secretary of the Treasury accused and cleared of charges that he attempted to defraud the Government in drawing up his income tax returns for 1931 at a time when, as head of the Treasury Department, he was the Nation's chief tax collector.

Mellon, who died last August, denounced the suit as "political persecution." He lived to see a Federal grand jury refuse to indict him on the fraud charge.

Although finding the fraud accusations groundless, the board of tax appeals did come to the conclusion that Mellon underpaid the Government by $485,809 in making his return for 1931, and to this amount added $182,000 interest.

The decision allowed the estate a $100,000 offset for gifts of five famous paintings to his charity trusts. Yesterday's agreement was that this finding be accepted as final, not to be appealed by either side.

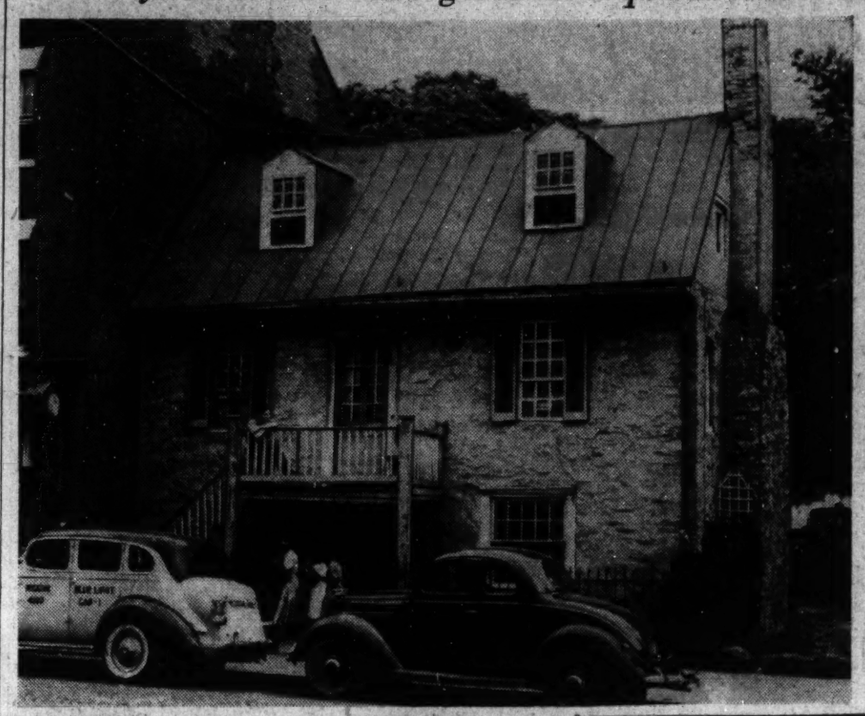
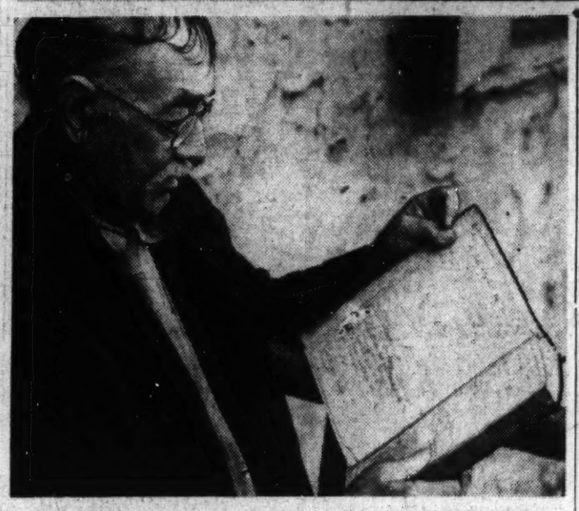
History Overlooks Washington's Headquarters Here





Post Staff Photos.

'Ghosts' of Washington's Staff Rove His M St. Headquarters

Only blue-coated ghosts, striding out of the past, when America won her struggle for independence, call at Gen. Washington's old engineering headquarters, at 3049 M street northwest.

They step across the threshold in the dusk, shade swords at their sides, shade boots polished despite the dusty floors. Often, in the darkness, they click brandy glasses over the boarded-up fireplace in the living room.

"Oh, lots of times I feel that George Washington is here," said James R. Davis, the 79-year-old tenant in the historic yellow stone building.

Watched Place 48 Years.

"Maybe Maj. L'Enfant, too, and a lot of others. Of course, I know it is just my imagination, but thinking such things at night helps an old man while away the time."

For 48 years Davis has watched over the property for the owners of the structure, the Goddard family, who live at Thirty-first and Dumbarton streets. For more than half a century Fred Goddard and his wife have possessed the house, which at one time was a rendezvous for visitors, who wished to look back into the history of the Nation.

Now the tourists come no more. Davis has several roomers, who are humble men ad walk unpretentiously through life. They and Davis are the unofficial hosts to the ghosts—but to Davis alone are the visitors from the past real.

Was Erected in 1764.

The building was erected in 1764 and saw much of the war. Washington certainly stopped there more than once, as did his other officers.

"Oh, I guess they were here—I feel they were here, and strapping fine fellows they must have been," sighed Davis last night.

The metal sign which called attention to the historical possibilities and antiquity of the structure has fallen away. The floor boards creak. The windows are dusty, and old pictures, such as "The Cockade" and "The Elopement," cling to the walls. Davis has a radio on which he can get the latest jazz. The roomers come in and go out, and sometimes a carpenter works in the back.

Outside, traffic roars through Georgetown—vehicles of which Washington never dreamed. Hundreds of children pass, sometimes looking apprehensive if it is dark. There is a junk dealer down the street, and a beer parlor nearby. And the dust of the city is thick, like cobwebs spun by time.

Smithsonian Aide Uncovers Traces of Ancient Brewers

Prehistoric West Texas Indians, Longest Headed People Ever Found, May Also Have Been Among the World's Heaviest Drinkers.

A prehistoric race of Indians who were the longest-headed people ever known on earth may also have been among the heaviest drinkers, according to discoveries in the Big Bend country of west Texas announced yesterday by the Smithsonian Institution.

A tremendous cave hewed out of a limestone cliff and apparently used as a ceremonial brewery has just been excavated near Dryden, Tex., by Frank M. Setzler, head curator of the institution's department of anthropology.

While searching for dwelling sites of this mysterious people whose existence he discovered only seven years ago, Setzler located a cave, 60 feet wide by 40 feet deep, that gave evidence of extensive cooking operations.

Setzler and his assistants dug through 9 feet of debris, uncovering arrowheads, scrapers, drills and stone knives but a relative scarcity of the usual cooked animal bones and human skeletons. (The caves ordinarily were both dwelling and burial places.)

In front of the cave was an abnormally large accumulation of cooking stones. Furthermore, there were great deposits of ashes of sotol, the lily from which a highly potent alcoholic beverage was brewed.

In addition to the lack of animal bones and human skeletons—indicating that the cave was not used to house a family group—and the abundance of cooking stones and sotol ashes, evidence that the cave was a brewery came from a boulder with a hole drilled in it. The boulder may have been used as a brewing kettle.

The Public Viewpoint.

The election to the board of directors of the Johns-Manville Corporation of Dr. Walter A. Jessup, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, marks a significant departure from customary practice. Of course, there is nothing unusual about the presence on such directorates of individuals whose chief interests lie outside the industrial field. The head of an endowed educational institution, for example, may be a director of a corporation in which funds belonging to his organization are invested. In that case, however, he would represent an owning group. Dr. Jessup has been asked to serve in the unique capacity of representative of the public.

His special duty is to interpret the public viewpoint to his fellow directors and assist them in formulating their policies accordingly. That is a difficult and rather indefinite assignment for any man. Whether a lone educator on the board of a great industrial corporation can do much to modify its actual policies is open to considerable doubt.

Nevertheless, the fact that the management of a large industrial concern is voluntarily seeking outside disinterested counsel is of major importance. It is an official acknowledgment that large private businesses are today "affected with a public interest," despite their comparative freedom from regulation. As the president of this corporation says, "the making of profits is, of course, fundamental to all soundly managed enterprises, but the measure of corporate success goes beyond profits and now includes service to the community and Nation as well."

Business men are, generally speaking, ready to accept in theory a responsibility for the public welfare. The actual assumption as well as acknowledgment of such responsibility is by no means so rare as critics of present-day corporate managements suppose. It is unusual for industrial executives to admit that the business man is not always the best judge of what may be the public interest. But that admission is nonetheless realistic. A completely detached judgment in weighing the claim of ownership against the public welfare is hardly to be expected from either the owners or managers of business establishments. There is real need of objective, expert advice, therefore, to save industrial managements from becoming wholly absorbed in the pursuit of profits.

A judicious balancing of public interest against private gain offers the best possible safeguard against Government interference with the conduct of business. Hence the concern which discharges its responsibilities in a way that meets with general approval is acting in its own as well as the public interest.

The Local Tax Study.

Washington is fortunate in having its revenue legislation scrutinized by the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. That body has acquired a reputation for thorough and conscientious research. Its expert advice to Congress has won the confidence of both Houses. It is doubtful whether a more competent or fair-minded group could have been selected to make the study of the District's tax system.

Local revenue laws have come in for a good deal of analysis during the last few years. Their defects are fairly well known. For example, the Jacobs committee pointed out that the local government relies too heavily upon the general property tax; that the intangible property tax is obsolete, inequitable and unproductive, and that new sources of revenue are needed to bring about a better distribution of the tax burden. Likewise the House District Committee made an extensive survey of possible sources of revenue before drafting its 1938 tax bill.

The need is not so much for a re-examination of the present unbalanced revenue system as for the development of a satisfactory program that can win the approval of Congress. Twice during the last two years constructive bills have been drawn only to be rejected after superficial consideration in the House. The chief task of the joint committee will be to devise a tax program that will not be thus lightly ripped to pieces.

For this reason it is hoped that the committee will conduct the study through its own experts, so far as possible, instead of hiring some private firm. Obviously the report will carry more prestige if it is based on findings made directly by the staff on which Congress relies for technical advice in formulating national revenue measures.

The Future Of State Planning.

The National Resources Committee today adds another report—the Future of State Planning—to the long list of important studies prepared under its direction. The establishment of planning boards in 45 States during the past five years is evidence of a remarkable growth. Nevertheless, the movement is still in its infancy. In two-thirds of the States the boards are said to be either in a precarious position or else relatively inactive. Elsewhere they are accepted as an integral part of the governmental structure.

The great bulk of the funds for these State planning bodies, however, has been supplied by Federal relief agencies. Most of their employes, too, are WPA workers, while consultants from the National Resources Committee have advised and directed the local staffs. In short, most of the planning for the States has been inspired, financed and directed by Federal agencies. Whether the State organizations would survive withdrawal of Federal support is in many cases, extremely doubtful.

The present study is designed primarily to show the major importance of these State agencies in any well-coordinated national planning program looking toward the conservation and beneficial use of the country's resources. Indeed, the report recommends that State planning be given priority over regional planning in the work of the National Resources Board. The reason given is that the State is the most appropriate sub-national unit for bringing planning activities into focus. Since it is not possible to ignore the State as a political entity, it is deemed wise to let the State planning agencies take the initiative in establishing the necessary interstate contacts.

One of the most interesting and suggestive features of the report is the discussion of the role of planning agencies under a representative form of government. The experts who have co-operated in producing this study are evidently eager to combat fears that planning organizations may develop into all-powerful groups issuing dictatorial decrees. They lay great stress upon the importance of maintaining the purely advisory character of planning agencies. The responsibility for making policy decisions rests, as noted, with the Legislature, the Governor and other policy-determining State officials.

Instead of being a political menace, it is pointed out that planning agencies of this type can do a great deal to strengthen the hold of representative institutions upon the electorate by making representative government function more effectively.

The extreme specialization of modern times and the growing variety and multiplicity of governmental activities have made the problem of co-ordination extraordinarily difficult. Neither legislative bodies nor the administrative branches of government are capable of dealing efficiently and intelligently with this problem without expert, detached advice. The role envisaged for the planning agency is to meet that need, to "consider in a long-range framework the interrelationships of the work of all departments and activities of the State government." And these State plans must be related in turn to Federal and local plans.

While such a long-range comprehensive program is still only a remote ideal, specialized types of planning with limited objectives have already proved their value repeatedly. It is undoubtedly true, as the report asserts, that the States and local governments which planned best have most to show now for the outpouring of Federal funds. The work-relief program has certainly made many communities acutely aware of the need for better and more systematic planning in the future. Hence the National Resources Committee has chosen an opportune time to emphasize the value of planning, not as an ephemeral aid to the control of emergency public spending, but as a permanent part of co-ordinated purposive government.

Higher Standards For The Bar.

A new effort to raise the standards of the legal profession in Washington will come to a head tomorrow night at 8 o'clock with a meeting of the Bar Association for the District at the Mayflower Hotel. That meeting has been called to consider a report of the Committee on Standards of Legal Education recommending that two years of prelegal college work or its equivalent be required of future District lawyers.

The committee has presented a strong argument to support its proposal. There is a general trend toward higher educational requirements for persons entering the professions. At least two years of preliminary college education, or its equivalent, are now required of law students in 36 States. It is no credit to the local bench and bar that Washington falls below the standard so generally adopted. Because of the complicated and varied nature of the legal service which lawyers in the Nation's Capital are called upon to perform, the District should stand with the most progressive and not the most backward of the States in educational requirements for admission to the bar.

At least two years of college education, in addition to professional training, are now required of doctors and dentists before they are licensed to practice in the District. Teachers must hold a college degree. Considering the intimate relation of the bar to the administration of justice and the conduct of government, it is certainly unreasonable to fix a lower standard for young men and women seeking careers in the legal profession.

In recommending this step the bar committee has been careful to avoid working a hardship on any promising individual knocking at the door of the profession. It proposes that the two-year college education requirement should not apply to students enrolling in law schools prior to 1940. Moreover, self-educated candidates for admission to the bar would be permitted to take the examinations under certain conditions. If they had completed a high school course, they might obtain from an accredited college or university a certificate showing them to have the equivalent of two years of college education.

With those safeguards, the committee appears to have left very little ground for opposition. On the contrary, the interests of the public, the bar and the individuals who expect to enter this profession argue strenuously for a raising of its educational standards. The times in which we are living offer little hope to the lawyer who is not educated as well as learned in the law.

It will be interesting to watch the reaction of the local bar to this challenge.

No Cause For Hysteria.

Except during World War days, when spy-mania in this country reached absurd heights, Americans have never regarded the foreign spy as a serious danger to the United States. Indeed, the general feeling has been that such an individual existed, for the most part, only in the imaginations of scenario writers and fabricators of mystery thrillers. But the suggestion, implicit in the indictment of 18 members of an alleged German spy ring which is believed to have been operating in this country since 1935, shows that, in a measure, we have taken too complacent a view of the subject.

After all, with war preparations reaching fantastic levels and with each nation trying to outdo every other not only in the quantity but also in the quality of such preparations, it is not surprising that an attempt should be made by foreign agents to ferret out industrial secrets regarding latest American models of bombing planes, heavy artillery, aircraft carriers and so on. Nor is it surprising, in view of the vast military potentialities of the United States, that foreign powers should be interested in our defense preparations, mobilization plans, fortifications, military and naval codes and other types of information which spies have traditionally sought to secure.

Almost alone among the major powers, the United States abstains from espionage. Nor, until now, have we even developed any effective system of counter-espionage, a circumstance which explains why only four of the 18 indicted individuals are at present within reach of the law. The others escaped the country before the authorities became aware of their activities or could lay hands on them.

No doubt one result of the German spy ring's alleged activities here will be the closing of this hole in our defense system. But it would be a mistake to jump from the complacent view that there are few or no foreign spies in this country to the hysterical belief that the United States is honeycombed with secret agents of foreign powers.

Even if the latter were true, which appears to be most unlikely, the evidence in the present case shows that there is little cause for real alarm. Many of the 18 who have been indicted appear to be bungling amateurs who, for the most part, provided their employers with information already available in published documents. And while the sinister element was not lacking in what they did and tried to do, effective measures of protection against such efforts can easily be taken.

In the meantime it is all to the good that the authorities are handling the problem without kid gloves. Spies and espionage thrive in the dark. They cannot long survive the sunlight of exposure.

Democracy In Uruguay.

The inauguration of Gen. Alfredo Baldomir as President of Uruguay will be welcomed in the United States on two counts.

In the first place it reflects the ebbing of the tide of dictatorship in still another Latin-American nation. Baldomir not only won the election over a government-supported candidate, an event that does not frequently occur in Latin America. He had also made the restoration of democracy in Uruguay, and opposition to fascism, the main planks in his platform. His election, plus the great outburst of popular enthusiasm on the occasion of his inauguration, shows how popular these pledges are among the people of one of the most socially-advanced nations of the southern continent.

At a time when real alarm exists in this country over the spread of Fascist ideas in Latin America, the Uruguayan development is undoubtedly encouraging. But Americans will also be pleased by the fact that the new chief executive of Montevideo is known as an admirer of the United States and an advocate of co-operative Pan-Americanism. Thus the high hopes voiced at the Pan American conference at Buenos Aires a year and a half ago continue to bear fruit.

"Latest tests place the mental age of the average American at 17 years."—Science note. That's highly encouraging. There's scarcely anything that a 17-year-old doesn't know.

A scientist says life began in hot water. If so, the cycle must be about complete.

Afraid Of The Future.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The papers report that Senator Barkley, who is assumed to speak for the President, proposes an investigation of the insurance companies. It looks to the writer as if the Administration has but one unceasing purpose, namely, to destroy all confidence in our economic system, and among the businessmen of the country. The future is, indeed, dark and discouraging. One is bewildered and doesn't know what to do in the way of business or investment.

The writer is getting on in years. He is walking toward the setting sun, and his earning capacity will soon be gone. He has managed to accumulate enough to buy an annuity in a life insurance company that would be enough to provide him with the necessities of life for the few remaining years that probably lie ahead, but his confidence in the future stability of our form of government and of our business institutions has been so completely shattered that he fears to entrust his savings of a lifetime to an insurance company or any other form of investment; and he is confident that if the New Deal is continued in power with its reckless extravagance, and irresponsible attacks upon business and its constant appeals to all the subversive elements of society his worst fears for the future will be fully realized.

It is one of the baffling anomalies of the times that the people seem so blind and indifferent to the trend of the New Deal, whose objectives will inevitably lead to disaster. Why do they not arise in their wrath and drive this Administration from office as the money changers were driven from the temple? PERPLEXED.

Political Word Battles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This country is enveloped by fog and, despite the economic upsets following the 1929 stock market debacle, much of the fog is created by politicians now all set for the Congressional elections a few months hence.

The Democratic and Republican Parties' publicity chiefs are ready for the "battle of the printed word," their inaugural releases having been printed side by side in The Post June 19. And they have indeed chosen apt titles: Mr. Nicholson, the Democrat, selected "Dispelling the Fog," and Mr. Waltman, the Republican, took as his "text" "Looking Forward." Inasmuch as looking forward in a fog is almost impossible and the fog first has to be dispelled, naturally, dispelling the fog has more appeal.

"Where there's smoke there's fire" is an old saw of much merit for application; many a fellow had made his own fire to get the smoke, nevertheless. And this is certainly true of the Democrats' director of publicity, whose Washington column in the late New York World often caused me to get up and go buy a "bulldog edition off Harlem newsstands. Then he built a fire under President Hoover. It was so intensely hot that I couldn't follow him.

In "burning up" Herbert Hoover, however, "Charlie" Michelson fed his fires too long; they are still smoldering. And because there is extreme doubt as to a fellow's ability to put out his own fires it was but natural for Mr. Michelson to quote someone else in that capacity, so he devoted the first installment of "Dispelling the Fog" to mostly verbatim reproduction of the content of a recent edition of Fortune Magazine. And this "battle of the printed word" has just begun.

On Frozen Royalists.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Barkley's fireside-chat-by-proxy, at White House suggestion, hugs the usual groove. Business plots, recurrence of the same old stuff that froze, even solidified, the Roosevelt depression, and continuance of which will keep it that way regardless of how many pumps are primed by how many "programs."

"The responsibility . . . of government during depressioin to create employment, etc." is dwelt upon even as Roosevelt in his silveriest moments.

What in such statements engages us of the moron type is why the Government adopted in the first place policies which force such "responsibility;" and cause the very freezing in royalists large and small of whom complaint is made.

High pressure finance captains are charged with blaming the recession on the 1936 revenue act. Well, that and a few other trifles, not overlooking the court grab plan and sit-down strike inaction. Perhaps the answer should be: So what? Can you blame 'em? Is this a greater crime than for the New Deal to lay all the blame on industry and enterprise?

Why do they cling to a type of rebuke which has already in the misuse done such immeasurable harm?

But why worry? In the interests of the mass-regimented voters reassurance is unnecessary. They don't even pretend to understand the heavy stuff anyhow. They're with the New Deal as long as they see the (apparent) favors flowing from that prolific source. Let another quarter loom as their probable source and their loyalty to the dear old Deal and its works would last about five seconds flat by industry's (stopped) watch.

Hard On The Nerves.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Talking about democracy, says one the other day:

"If you want to get along, just keep your mouth shut, even if the country or the city goes to the dogs.'"

Of course, I was only telling him about the condition of the street in our block, between R and S, on Wisconsin avenue. Seeing that repeated efforts to have proper officials look into the matter have failed, I was telling my friend that I would like to, personally, mix some sand and cement together, and fill up the holes on the road in front, or near our house, so that when iron-wheeled trucks do pass by the walls and ceilings would not crack and my wife would not be scolding me for not saying or doing something about it.

Can you blame her when the house shakes at such times, when she remembers that the final fall of the Knickerbocker Theater was probably precipitated by such continuous vibrations, which went unnoticed by the owners and others who should have done something?

To me democracy, that is to say popular government, is the only way for civilized nations, but, like any human institution or even material instrument, it must be used and not be misused. Is there any way that the editor can influence highway supervisors to remedy this intolerable situation? Any intelligent person should understand that here on Wisconsin avenue, where truck traffic is very heavy, the road gets sooner worn out and must be repaired, and it is more important for the human beings who must have peace in their homes than the road surface of the Skyline drive, where there are no houses to be shaken or tired housewives who must have a reasonable amount of quiet.

C. PHILIPS.

Washington, June 20.

Suicide.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Couldn't the newspapers supplement the work of the churches in discouraging the idea of suicide as a solution of any problem, however grave? No one should consider suicide for even one moment, no matter to what extremity he may be reduced, not even though he has lost, or thinks he has lost, everything good in life. He really may not have lost anything. It may be that his courage is being tried, and, like Job of old, he will soon have again all that he thinks he has lost.

But, assuming that one actually has lost everything that makes life joyous—love, friends, health. Then for love of God and his fellowman, and for the salvation of his own soul, he must still live his life. Anyone facing, as he thinks (though no one can really know), years of suffering should remember that suffering makes for perfection, and as the work of perfecting of character progresses, how great he may become, how much good he may do here, what happiness will be his hereafter, and even here he will know a measure of happiness in the realization that the world is a better place because he is living courageously in it. VERONICA SMITH.

Bulletin Stands Firm.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reference to the item, "No Racial Restrictions," which appeared in your paper June 18, wherein a Federal employes' union has seen fit to criticize an editorial letter presented in the Federal Diary and authored by the writer as editor of the Washington Federal Bulletin, please be advised that since the Federal Bulletin is primarily a legislative reporting service based upon documents of record, any charge of inaccuracy is a gross misstatement. The Federal Bulletin also refuses to become involved in any controversy or issues concerning race, color, religion or politics, and refuses further to be used as a vehicle for union membership purposes. Accordingly, the Washington Federal Bulletin does not and will not retract one word or line in its recent letter-editorial denouncing Federal employe unions for failure to adopt uniform presentations to the Congress.

HARRY G. RITNER,
Editor, the Washington Federal Bulletin.

Washington, June 21.

Just A Century Ago.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Amid so many gloomy and pessimistic utterances in forum, pulpit and street, was it not refreshing and heartening to hear the recent address of Mr. W. J. Cameron?

In brave, clear tones, he said, in part: "Most of us beyond 30 years of age have known persons who lived around 100 years ago—and going back even that short space of time we find the land more troubled than we have seen it or are likely to see it.

"In that general period the American people were lamenting the scarcity of great men—Leviathan hath departed from the sea, they said, 'and we live in a millennium of minnows.' Specie payments were suspended. Banks and business houses were failing everywhere. Strikes tied up the Atlantic Coast. Men were shot down for their political opinions. Because of their religious beliefs their houses were burned over the heads of hundreds of families. Four thousand persons were dying of cholera in New York. Two and a half million slaves existed in the land.

Americans were seizing government arms and ammunition to start a war against Canada, and when caught were promptly hanged by our level-headed neighbor across the border. Sectional antagonism was rising which 25 years later was to bring on four years of civil war.

It was a common fear 100 years ago that as a political experiment the American republic had broken down. Have our times had alarms like these?

"A second thing we know is that in the midst of all that turmoil and peril great things were being born in silence, like flowers of spring beneath the snow. Few noticed them then. A portrait painter was showing a curious contraption called a telegraph. A Massachusetts woman was flouting all the proprieties by establishing a school for the higher education of girls—a most unladylike thing to do. The ten-hour day was coming in. The harvester was supplanting the scythe. The sewing machine was doing away with the weary dirge of the needle—stitch, stitch, stitch? As obscure boys, great men were growing toward their splendid careers.

"Everywhere the future was sending up its unnoticed tender shoots to become the mighty oaks that remain to this day. And now the uncurbed mobs, the wildcat money, the deadly plagues, the sectional divisions, all have passed away. The schools, the inventions, the liberties, the social progress have remained—they are spiritual. And that, we may be certain, is precisely what is occurring today, if we had eyes to see it."

The Post Impressionist

Heroic Cycle.

THE most distinctively American type of literature yet produced is the Western, or so-called "shoot-'em-up" story. This type has its origin in the dime novels of the '80's, which were mostly tales of Indian fighting, and continues with unabated popularity to the present day. It forms the staple and, indeed, almost the only reading matter of vast numbers of people. Boys all over the country thrill to the exploits of these fearless fellows. Farm workers find in them a temporary escape from the monotony of their lives. Workingmen in cities find themselves transported to the wide open spaces, to liberty and the adventurous life.

Curiously enough, cowboys themselves are the most avid readers of these stories. A great deal of the romance and adventure that formerly surrounded their lives is gone. The West is tamed now. The Indians are no longer a menace. Law and order have become part of the mores. The open warfare between sheepherders and cattlemen is a thing of the past.

Consequently, the cowboy turns to these idealizations of an order that is no more for the romance and adventure which have largely departed from his life. The hero of every Western story is a perfect picture of what the cowboy would like to be.

The characters of the Western story are rigidly formalized. The hero is a clean-living, hard-riding, square-shooting he-man. He has no vices except, perhaps, a quick temper and a touchy pride. His respect for good women is unbounded. He is an expert horseman and an incredible marksman, a man of infinite resource, ingenuity and courage. Nothing daunts him, and even the most hopeless predicament finds him ready with a daring solution. Usually he is equipped with a horse which is an equine counterpart of his rider, and a trusty "pardner." The "pardner" is a sort of hero in miniature who accompanies the real hero on all his adventures, a constant help in time of trouble. Occasionally he has amiable weaknesses which land him in difficulties from which the hero must rescue him.

The bad men are really bad. The leading bad man is preferably a saloonkeeper and the proprietor of a gambling hell. He supports a crowd of pug-uglies who carry out his sinister designs, but who turn yellow at the crucial moment and are easily overcome by the hero.

The sheriff is an important figure in most Western tales. Ordinarily, he is represented as a good man, but under the domination of the villain, so that he is forced to seem to support his nefarious schemes. The hero's victory over the forces of evil enables him to come out into the open and clean up on the lawless element, with the hero's aid, of course.

The female figures are of the very shadowiest, mere insubstantial phantoms. The heroine is a girl of rare beauty, and it is essential that her hair lie like a shimmering aureole about her head. She must ride well and be possessed of dauntless courage. A favorite situation is that in which, through the premature death of her father, she has to assume management of the ranch. The hero becomes her foreman and succeeds in thwarting the designs of a neighboring ranch owner, who has designs on both the heroine and her possessions.

Often a foil to the heroine is provided in the person of an Eastern girl, cold and supercilious, who despises the West and all its ways. After she has been captured by the bad men and rescued by the hero she undergoes a change of heart, but by this time it does not matter much, for the hero has already swept the heroine into his arms.

JOHN T. APPLEBY.

The Underpasses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The warning of Mr. C. Marshall Finnan that underpasses at Dupont and Thomas circles may lead to a further demand for the widening of Massachusetts avenue and destruction of its beauty and value as a residential thoroughfare should be given careful consideration.

Unfortunately mechanical "projects" are much like surgical operations and one project is likely to lead to another project, to the benefit of the projectors, but the destruction of the patient, in this case the City of Washington. Our once lovely Nation's Capital is all too rapidly losing its former distinctive atmosphere and charm and becoming just one more big, ugly, barren, second-rate American town, with a gridiron of speedways.

About the only redeeming feature of the present program, assuming that some vestigial remains of the present circles will survive, is that there are to be underpasses instead of overpasses. Imagination shudders to think of Washington ridden with huge concrete ramps that disfigure Manhattan, contrary to all natural laws in that heavy vehicles are elevated instead of depressed, and making a dismal no-man's land of all the surrounding areas and buildings.

Meanwhile, no matter how wide a street is made and how many shade trees are destroyed in the process, it has only two curbs, and our parking problem will never be solved by methods such as these.

It will be solved only by limiting, not increasing, the number of "private locomotives" allowed on the public streets, so enormously wasteful of both money and space, and by making transportation, as it should be, entirely a public function with an adequate system of publicly owned vehicles operated for use and not for profit.

The Once Over

By
H. I. Phillips.

The Babe's Return.

The slump seems far from bottom,
My dough is going fast;
There is no way of telling
How long hard times will last.
The world seems extra screwy
And quite devoid of shame;
There's just one thing that cheers me—
The Babe's back in the game!

II.

The unemployment figures
Are getting worse each day,
With debts increasing hourly,
The problem's how to pay;
War clouds are all about us,
The world is racked by pain,
Still I am cheered a little
To know Babe's in again.

III.

The Japs bomb open cities
And seem to think it sport;
Of ethics all the nations
Now seem a little short.
I read about torpedoes,
Death rays and gases new—
But when I hear Ruth's working
I don't feel quite so blue.

IV.

The Spanish war depresses,
I loathe the Hitler crowd
And wince when Mussolini
Expresses thoughts aloud;
I'm sickened and despondent—
I'd take it "on the lam"
But for the news that someone
Has re-employed the "Bam."

V.

Revolts and wide uprisings—
Those crackpot ways and means—
Those purges of dissenters—
Those strange official scenes—
They make me sad and gloomy
And I'd jump off the dock—
Except that Babe's returning—
Boy, how that guy could sock!

VI.

I'm baffled by the crisis
My country seems to face;
I find it most depressing
The New Deal plays no ace;
I feel the whole world's skidding
And wouldn't give a damn,
Except that I feel better
Since they employed the "Bam!"

Those new streamlined trains the railroads are putting out are so beautiful the sheriff just hates to serve the papers.

The Trust Problem

By Walter Millis.

UNTIL MR. BARUCH gives a clearer idea of just what he regards as "abuses"; until Mr. Richberg has succeeded in writing his definitions of the "monopolistic practices" to be prohibited and relating them plainly to the trade agreements "to protect and promote business" which he would authorize; until Mr. Jackson has lent precision to his concept of "monopoly," we are dealing only with the tactics of a campaign for which no strategy has yet been worked out. The tactics are important. Whether to proceed by criminal prosecution or civil suit, whether to define and punish or more generally to indicate and administer, whether to mingle sanctions for some kinds of combination (the "good trusts") in with the prohibitions upon other (the "bad trust") kinds, are all serious issues, but secondary ones. The machinery cannot properly be set up until the designs for the product which it is to turn out are in hand; and the very fact that all these issues have been fought over continuously for 40 years with so little agreement and so little result is its own indication of the lack of any adequate primary design.

• • • •

ONE TURNS AGAIN to the Presidential message of April 29 to read over the matters which it recommended for study: technical changes in antitrust procedure; powers to prevent mergers, to control investment trusts and to oversee the uses to which the great accumulations of the life insurance companies are put; supervision of trade associations; amendment of the patent laws, and the development of "tax correctives." All, once more, are matters of method. They speak of the kind of controls that any system of business regulation might use; they say nothing as to the utilization to be made of them. Acquiring the power to prevent mergers, for instance, implies nothing as to the sort of mergers that ought to be prevented. The vital matter of the design for the new industrial scheme of living which is to eliminate the apparent defects in the present one, the President has entrusted to further investigation. But just to read over this catalogue of proposed controls, together with the hints in the January 3 message, is enough, I think, to show the appalling complexity and far-reaching scope of the true problem which any real effort at antitrust revision must pose.

• • • •

FOR THE OLD and seemingly simple question of competition against combination has long since been swallowed up in the torrential advance of the times. It has become nothing less than the whole problem of price policy, wage policy, production policy and investment policy throughout the economy as a whole, and the proper interrelation of these policies in order to keep that economy generally operating at a high level of activity. To discuss the regulation of such matters in the old terms of "monopoly," "restraint of trade," "unfair competition" and so on, is about as easy as to tune up a V-8 automobile with nothing but the tools and the terminology appropriate to maintaining a mule-powered covered wagon in running order. The task, if it is to be attempted at all, is a task for a corps of highly expert mechanics working with a pretty clear idea of the functions which the economy is to perform, and free to use a wide variety of adjusting and controlling devices as each may be appropriate to some different part of the system.

• • • •

BECAUSE IT IS such a task it may be doubted, without excessive cynicism, that it will really be attempted even by Mr. Roosevelt's rash Administration; if it is attempted, it seems highly probable that any results that may finally be achieved through the inevitable storms of opposition will be just about as confused, contradictory and unworkable as the NRA experiment turned out to be. But as the whole issue is now turned over to the mercies of Congressional investigatorial wisdom, it is no use blinking our eyes to the true enormity of its scope and intricacy.

The Wages Act

Opinion Is That Southern Labor Will Get Little Benefit From Wage-Hour Bill, If Discriminatory Freight Rates Continue.

By Carroll Kilpatrick,

Montgomery, Ala.

WHILE MOST VOCAL OPINION in the South has been at times hysterical in its opposition to all wages and hours legislation, this correspondent has found it almost impossible to discover specific instances where the Fair Labor Standards act will work undue hardships. Southern business and industrial leaders remain, however, overwhelmingly opposed to the law and continue to predict dire consequences because of it.

On the other hand, neutral observers sympathetic to the South's case are beginning to see where the legislation may have some happy effects, although virtually everyone admits that wages and hours legislation alone will not solve the region's distressing economic problems. Too many other factors are involved.

It is true, according to the Gallup poll, that approximately 56 per cent of all Southerners were in favor of the wages and hours proposal. This fact is borne out, to some extent at least, by the renomination of Senator Claude Pepper in Florida. All through the South in recent years, particularly since the presidential election in 1932, complaint has been loud against existing economic hardships from those least favored. Cotton pickers have begun to organize and labor unions have flourished as they never have before in this section of the country.

But, while agricultural workers are exempt from the provisions of the act in question, many farm hands who do part-time work in sawmills will be benefited. The lumber and fertilizer industries will be specifically affected by the wages and hours act, and only time can tell how drastic the effect will be. Many lumber mill operators say they will be forced to close shop, while some of the larger operators say they will be seriously crippled. Perhaps a tenth of the workers in the cottongoods industries also will be directly affected.

Wage and hour opposition in the South came, however, as much from those business leaders who will not be specifically involved by the legislation. As in all sections there was considerable opposition, especially in newspapers, on the ground of economic principle. When the House passed the bill by a vote of 314 to 97, the Birmingham Age-Herald repeated that "this bill is a striking example not of the disposition of an issue on merit and reason. It is an evidence of surrender either to class or political or sectional interest or of superficial, emotional or downright ignorant economics. It is, indeed, a step in the direction of authoritarian government."

Southerners Sought A Wage Differential.

THERE WAS OPPOSITION to the bill also on the ground that first the South should be relieved of unfair freight rate discriminations. Freight rates make it impossible for the South to compete freely with other sections, and have been a direct cause of lower wages in the South. The region continues to insist that it cannot lift itself economically while arbitrarily discriminated against by a 39 per cent freight rate differential on Southern goods.

It was largely on this argument, and because of the tariff, that Southerners in Congress did their best to obtain a sectional wage and hour differential. The best informed Southern opinion agrees, however, that they failed almost completely in this particular effort, although many Congressmen, for political face-saving reasons, have said that a sectional differential was partially obtained.

The South has suffered heavily because of the tariff, being forced to buy its goods in a protected market and sell its products in an open market. For example, during the last year, according to a bulletin recently issued by the Department of Agriculture, farm prices as a whole declined about 23 per cent, compared with a drop of only 7 per cent in the price of articles the farmer buys. When it is remembered that the South is still predominantly agricultural—70 per cent of all Alabamians, for instance, are farmers—the significance of this fact can be quickly appreciated.

Some Southerners also argue that living costs below the Mason and Dixon Line are lower than elsewhere, but the Richmond Times-Dispatch doubts this argument. When the wages and hours bill became law, that paper said editorially:

"We put no credence in the argument that Southern living costs are lower. We have seen half a dozen studies of this question by both Northern and Southern authorities, and they all agree that places of corresponding size, North and South, have roughly the same living costs. The Southern worker has been living on less because he makes less, not because it costs him less to live.

"The new wage-and-hour bill can be administered in such a way as to provide the South with additional purchasing power, something which this region sorely needs. Dixie has long been cursed with the lowest per capita income in the Nation, and the ills which accompany such an income. On the other hand, the bill can do considerable harm, if it is badly or vindictively administered."

The South has also asked relief from discriminatory Federal and State taxation on oleomargarine and other vegetable oil products, and the Birmingham district has suffered from the basing point system in the steel industry.

How Much Will The Workers Really Gain?

BUT OF MOST immediate concern is the question whether the act will raise appreciably the wage scale. The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot says that "it is asking a great deal to expect complete success in the carrying out of this program. But though the methods are uncertain and mistakes will probably be made, the safeguards against powerful disruptions appear to be ample. The chances are that far from disrupting Southern industry the plan will not greatly improve the conditions of Southern workers. Its chief merit is that it makes a start toward an improvement that in time must come and should come."

One large lumber mill operator and one large textile manufacturer—both of whom pay wages above those paid by many of their competitors—have said that they favor the present act because it will protect them against sweatshop competitors. Wages in many of the cotton textile mills have been very low, and for some years an operator in Alabama has labored to establish within the industry a minimum wage. This particular person is happy now that the wage and hour bill is at last passed.

There also is the question of Negro versus white labor. If the act increases the pay and shortens the hours of colored workers, the white worker is sure to gain. Negro labor has been cheaper than white labor of the same kind, and the white laborer has suffered because, it has been argued, the Negro could not be paid a higher wage. This has affected all Southern labor, though most Southerners have been slow to realize it.

There is one other argument in favor of the new labor law. It is said by labor leaders that it will ease the shock of future labor-capital conflicts in a region that has known some ugly labor battles. The act will gradually push wages up and become the basis for negotiations. This is sound argument, not unworthy of the employers' attention.

In conclusion it might be said that industry in the South will not suffer greatly during the first few years of the life of the fair labor standards act. Neither will labor greatly benefit from it. The future effect of the act will depend largely upon what relief the South gets from what it calls unfair discrimination. "It isn't that the South as a region wants special consideration in fixing wage discrimination," the Birmingham News points out. "The South asks no favors. Given equality in freight rates, in borrowing facilities, in commodity prices on Northern points, the South would not want any advantages in wages."

Caldwell

By Lewis Gannett.

"Distinguished And Exasperating."

HERE IS ERSKINE CALDWELL'S new volume of short stories, "Southways" (Viking, $2.50). I think they confirm Mr. Caldwell's position as one of the most distinguished and exasperating writers in America today. Ask me who are our half-dozen front-rank men still actively producing, and I will think at once of Erskine Caldwell, yet hesitate to name him definitely—just as I have been doing for five years.

He wasn't on that list of brave new writers which Sinclair Lewis paraded to the Swedes and to the world in his Nobel Prize speech back in 1930; he was not yet known even as the author of his first book, "American Earth." With "Tobacco Road" (1932) the critics began shouting for Caldwell. I wasn't among the shouters then. (It is one of the sometimes bitter amusements of a critic to look back and watch the veering winds of his own opinion.) There was a "certain stark power in Caldwell's writing," I conceded, but his Lester Jeeters seemed to me "incredibly far below the lowest standards of men and beasts . . . beneath the range of human emotion and for that reason incredible." "God's Little Acre," a year later, again brought forward the claim that Erskine Caldwell combined the talents of Mark Twain and Rabelais; and again I thought it "caricature," subhuman cartooning."

I thought then, and I think still, that it was an insult to Rabelais to call Caldwell's bitter stories "humor." He has written funny stories; "Tobacco Road" never seemed to me funny. Much of the guffawing mood of the audiences at the play has been read into the lines, in the long course of that play's run, by a sadistic audience and a cast which could not help responding to the audience; but I doubt that Caldwell himself ever thought of it as anything but tragedy.

• • • •

CALDWELL'S SHORT STORIES have always covered a wider range than his novels. "Tobacco Road," "God's Little Acre," "Journeyman" are all of a mood. But the man himself, the writer Caldwell, has many moods. The angry intensity, the bitter laugh—a laugh which is so bitter as to be far from humor—of those novels finds expression in the stories, too; but each new volume has marked a widening range, a deepening pity, something which one might call a sense of responsibility.

Perhaps I was too shocked when I read Caldwell's early novels. We are both ministers' sons; I suspect it is that very shockable background which forced Caldwell to write the stories which have repelled some of his readers. But with "Kneel to the Rising Sun" I began to find in at least some of Caldwell's stories "a raw, naked intensity of dumb emotion which is sheer genius," and also a "lusty, gusty Elizabethan vitality, and a modern bitter pity." Pity—that is a quality existent in all great writing which I missed in Caldwell's earlier work: It was I who missed it; it was obscurely present, accentuating the bitterness at the obscenities of life as Caldwell saw it lived. After reading "Kneel to the Rising Sun" in 1935, I called Caldwell "the most profoundly tragic writer on contemporary America."

It was in those middle years of the depression that Caldwell began to write also serious little articles about the lot of the tenant farmer. He left Hollywood in a sour mood and drove eastward, recording his impressions of "Some American People" in an uneven book, which his regular publishers thought might hurt his literary reputation; Caldwell merely took it to another publisher. It did him no good; it did him no harm; it expressed his honest and somewhat bewildered concern for America. When he tried to solve the problem of the cotton farmers, he reveals what he himself doubtless knew, that he was better as a reporter of human beings than as an economist. But some of us liked him all the better for wanting to get behind the human beings on the tobacco roads to the system which had produced them . . . The same weakness—and the same basic strength—was obvious in the text he wrote for Margaret Bourke-White's photographs of tenant farmers, "You Have Seen Their Faces." It is magnificent when it reports human speech, pretty sad when it talks about a commission to study the problem.

• • • •

NOW HERE is the first volume of stories Caldwell has published in three years. It is like the others, but also different. There is the same deft craftsmanship, the same oral rhythm, the same pungent brevity; but the balance is new. There is more pity in it. I still don't know whether Caldwell will ever write a great novel, or what his stories will amount to in sum. He is still groping his way. But he has possibilities such as very few men writing in America have even suggested.

Here are two of those rough-humor stories which to many seem typical of Caldwell: one of a lecherous old former governor who decided that it would be a mighty small day when he ever tried to handle a hellcat like Miss Daisy again; one of a small boy's glee as he watched his drunken father break up the family furniture, while his mother fought with the young girl his father had brought home. Both stories appeared first in The New Yorker.

Here, also, are some of those heart-breaking, heartaching stories which suggest a new Caldwell. "Man and Woman" appeared in The New Yorker; one appeared in Direction; one exquisite such story, "Wild Flowers," has never before been published. (Another little home game which readers might try is to fit the stories to the magazines where they were first published; the book gives a list of magazines, but does not fit the individual stories to the magazines. I tried and failed. I'd never have credited The Atlantic with its story, though The Red Book's might be easier to guess. Perhaps the very best in the book comes from Esquire, and one which would seem to me worlds remote from the publication was printed in College Humor. Mr. Caldwell's agent says that the story which first appeared in The Sunday Worker was refused by 21 other magazines. Of three stories handling with rare frankness race relations, two first saw print in Esquire, one in The Atlantic!)

• • • •

AS A SAMPLE of the art with which Mr. Caldwell can set a mood, with vastly more than wit, let me quote this opening paragraph of a story first printed in Harper's Bazaar:

"You couldn't see no stars, you couldn't see no moon, you couldn't see nothing much but a measly handful of sparks on the chimley spout. It was a mighty poor beginning for a female courting on a 10 o'clock night. Hollering didn't do a bit of good, and stomping up and down did less."

Fully to relish the art of that paragraph you must read also the rest of the story. And I recommend that you do.

Turns With a Bookworm

Now don't forget to keep an eye out for "It's All Adventure" . . . It will be published at the end of this month . . . It's the best book in sight so far . . .

• • • • •

The exotic note is popular . . . Father Jerome sends us a few young camphor trees, with the suggestion: "If you intend to go into growing camphor trees commercially, move to some sub-tropical area (note, why move? we're in one already) and plant 1,210 trees per acre, 6 feet apart each way; and then, after four years, clip them three to four times a year and distill about 170 pounds of camphor per acre from the leaves and twigs of the trees; and then go broke, because camphor today is produced synthetically and very cheaply at that. But camphor trees make fine pot plants" . . .

• • • • •

It's very hard to convey what weather may mean; the figures don't signify so much as the circumstances . . . We have lived through spells of 50 below zero—and we'd know Mr. Adams' memories are authentic because what he really wrote was just "30 below," omitting the word zero . . . You don't consider it below anything until it gets below zero . . .

• • • •

During such cool waves, when one stays in the house, fairly near the stove, and after one has acquired the routine of thawing out frozen bread and milk in order to get a meal, and scraping an inch of frost off the window pane to look out, there's really no special hardship . . . Also, the men folks go out and do whatever work must be done; they may even be out in those temperatures all day if necessary . . . When they come in they count ears and noses . . .

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Here is an interesting letter on what seems to be a very sweet situation:

"Recently I read in your column an item about the Comptroller General's decision regarding leave on Saturdays to be charged as a full day. I wish to call your attention to another matter, which, I am told, is due also to the Comptroller General.

"Some time ago I held a position, call it CAF-6 if you like, in a department which was working under an allotment of PWA funds. When the money was spent, I was laid off 'until such time as more funds become available.' I had been working in this place for four years prior to this but it was only in the last year that they were working on PWA funds.

"So with no job and with no immediate prospect of being called back to the job, I looked around and located another job which I intended to hold until something better showed up. Call this job grade CAF-3, if you like. Now, back at the old place where I had worked for four years they have a new allotment of PWA funds and would like me back.

"I would like to go back, but I am told I will have to take my present grade, CAF-3. This, they say, is due to the Executive order of the President, issued, I think, in 1934, forbidding a raise in grade on a transfer, etc., until six months have passed.

"So it now appears that someone, the Comptroller General, I am told, has expanded the meaning of this order to now include reinstatements, so that having once accepted a lower salary you are stuck in that grade. It has also been expanded to include not only transfers from one PWA unit to another but even from a permanent establishment like the Interior Department to a WPA unit."

The Capitol Hill contingent on the Government-sponsored cruise to Puerto Rico is growing. Among them are Miss Alice Harvey, secretary to Representative Dewey Short, of Missouri; Miss Jessie Taylor, Senator Rush Holt's secretary; Mrs. W. J. George, secretary to Representative Ewing Thomason, of Texas, and Miss Dorothy Allen, secretary to Senator Glass. Approximately 300 tickets were sold up to yesterday, but many good accommodations are still open. You may contact the U. S. Tourist Bureau, room 341-D, North Interior Building, for complete information.

Comes an invitation to the "Down on the Farm Day" to be held Sunday at Tree Haven, in nearby Virginia, by U. F. W. A., Local 10, Social Security Board. The program includes croquet, tennis, softball, races, darts and dancing, and more importantly some watermelon, barbecue and drinks. Transportation will be by hay trucks, starting from the headquarters at 532 Seventeenth street northwest at 1:30 p. m. For those who wish to drive their own cars, someone will lead the way from the headquarters. We recommend it as a good party.

And here is another interesting letter on an interesting controversy revolving around the editor of the Washington Federal Bulletin, who also is a GAO employe:

"Some months ago I visited the Capitol and talked with a Congressman very much interested in the welfare of Federal employes. He was serious when he expressed doubt of Federal employes ever receiving substantial benefits and warned that Federal employes would find it hard keeping existing benefits if the campaign to balance the budget began. Upon further questioning, I learned with amazement the lack of uniformity in presenting employes' problems to the Congress for action. Frowning, the Congressman asked:

"'How in the world may employes expect help from us when there is not presented for our consideration uniform demands and if employes can't agree on what they want? Why can't you start something? I know that you have written thousands and thousands of words on behalf of employes.'

"So it was without any thought of consideration, but only a promise to a member of Congress that I went to work. Two days later your readers read my letter calling for action. Perhaps it would interest your readers to know the reaction, since I ask for criticism. Here it is:

"There came 22 phone calls and 31 letters. Two-per cent wanted to know what I was getting out of it but failed to criticize. One per cent called me names anonymously and suggested that I was interfering with their bread and butter. Eighty-four per cent congratulated me and expressed confidence that much good would come out of my campaign. Of this group 100 per cent stated they were union members and would insist on some lodge procedure in accordance with my proposal. The remaining 13 per cent took me to task in one way or another.

"I gave it and am able to take it. If I have caused Federal employes to think about presenting uniform demands to Congress, I shall feel amply satisfied."

Dunkum, of the Board of Education, president at Macfarland Junior High exercises yesterday afternoon, and Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent, had charge of Taft Junior High ceremonies last night. Jere J. Crane, assistant superintendent, was in charge of the program at Lenox Vocational School last night.

(Graduates' names appeared in last Sunday's Post.)

Dr. Seymour Tells 606 Yale Seniors They Lift 'Ideals'

New Haven, Conn., June 21.—Dr. Charles Seymour, president of Yale University, in his first commencement address since elevation to the presidency in October, complimented 606 graduates of Yale College, the Sheffield Scientific School and the Yale College of Engineering today on their having played an important part in what he termed "the elevation of undergraduate ideals in a philosophical sense."

More than 2,000 alumni were on hand for today's ceremonies, the 237th in the history of Yale.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

New Rainer Vehicle Uses Up More Atmosphere of Old South on the Screen; Civic Theater Is Preening; 'Rage of Paris' Continues; Notes of the Theater.

IF DAVID O. Selznick is relying on the atmosphere of the Old South as a productional asset, he had better get his film version of "Gone With the Wind" under way before it is too late. As a matter of fact, it may already be too late to derive much benefit at the box-office from palmettos, hanging moss, fow-necked carriages and high-pillared mansions, entirely surrounded by slaves singing at their devotions.

BELL.

I mean to say that as long ago as "Jezebel" it was feared that the "edge had been taken off" anything Mr. Selznick might eventually—if ever—choose to do with the Margaret Mitchell best-seller. While that assurance may not be made doubly sure, at least it is modestly multiplied by "The Toy Wife," previewed yesterday afternoon by a full representation of the drama desks.

"The Toy Wife" is by way of being the most recent Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle for the limpid talents of Luise Rainer, twice winner of the Academy award for the superlative screen acting among members of her gender. It also is by way of being a film play that is strongly reminiscent of "Jezebel," except that it has a Camille-like bit of tuberculosis, instead of yellow fever, to bring a tear to susceptible eyes at its very end.

Visually, "The Toy Wife" is a thing of great beauty; dramatically, I fear it does not rank among the most substantial pieces of dramaturgy in which its star has been seen. As a frivolous and flittery ingenue, Miss Rainer is less impressive than in the more somber moods of the play's closing sequences, although it must be said that she has mastered the trick of manipulating hoopskirts and crinolines of billowy and expansive sweep with a greater degree of graceful dexterity than most of her sisters under the Kleigs.

The acting star of the picture, it seemed to me yesterday, was Barbara O'Neil, who recently was acclaimed for the best supporting role of the month on the strength of her performance in this subject. That consensus of Hollywood opinion is to be applauded.

Perhaps what ails this typewriter is that "The Toy Wife" is distinctly a "woman's picture." It is not difficult to imagine many drenched handkerchiefs at its first local performance at Loew's Palace Theater on Friday—a circumstance that prompts sympathetic regret that ladies' handkerchiefs are not of more ample dimensions.

A helpful correspondent writes in from Arlington, Va., to offer first aid to those who experience difficulty in remembering the names of the Dionne quintuplets, as it was suggested here yesterday some might.

There are two mnemonic acrostics, he points out, that will help you score 100 per cent on the names of the quints. They are:

M-arie		M-arie
Y-vonne		A-nnette
		C-ecile
A-nnette	or	E-milie
C-ecile		Y-vonne
E-milie

Learn one thing each day is what I always say, except in cases like the present. With the acute sort of memory that habitually handicaps this column, we probably will endeavor at some future time to identify the Dionne youngsters by remembering the words "My Deuce" and "Wanamakers!"

True to every promise of its first night, "The Rage of Paris," starring Danielle Darrieux, seems to have settled down for a run at RKO-Keith's Theater. Announcement arrives from Manager Hardie Meakin that this gay and enlivening comedy will remain a second week on Fifteenth street, beginning tonight—its world premiere, it will be recalled, occurred, out of turn, on last Wednesday night, instead of the customary Friday, or even the Thursday originally planned.

This continuance of a hit picture at Keith's is not at all unusual, barring one fact. Never before in the history of the house, as a citadel of celluloid drama, has any first American-made picture of any imported star ever been accorded extended playing time on its screen.

There has to be a "first time" for everything, of course, and it seems particularly appropriate in the instant case that Mlle. Darrieux and "The Rage of Paris" should be its beneficiaries.

Here we have a sprightly and deftly written bit of froth, starring the most promising young actress that has ever found her way before the Hollywood cameras and microphones from Europe or anywhere else.

What more do you want, unless it is a good cry instead of a good laugh? If that is it, this is the wrong number.

A bulletin from the offices of the Loew theaters in Washington—Loew's Capitol, Palace and Columbia—comes to hand to the effect that the highlights of the big melee in New York tonight, between two boys named Joe—except that one of them is called Max Schmeling—will be described to the audiences from the stages of the respective houses. Special time schedules have been worked out to permit this heavyweight championship boxing event to be made a part of the evening's program in each theater. All of this, needless to say, is with the proviso that the bout is not rained out.

Perhaps it should have been remarked back there in connection with "The Toy Wife," that Melvyn Douglas, cast opposite Luise Rainer in the principal male role, is rather in his element as a high-strung Southern gentleman—with apologies to that other one, Sam Galanty.

Mr. Douglas, it seems, was born in Macon, Ga., and attended school in Nashville, Tenn. Strangely enough, you would never suspect it from his Southern accent. He hasn't any and assumes none for his present part.

It is Miss Rainer who has the accent—but it isn't Southern, although that fact is neatly accounted for in a bit of early dialogue.

The Washington Civic Theater is feeling all set up these days and not without cause. The Theater Arts Monthly for June devotes considerable linage to the work of this conscientious group and a full page to pictures of the simplified stage sets used for its memorable production of "Johnny Johnson," the Paul Green play that stands as the Civic's most notable achievement to date—with the possible exception of its pretentious presentation of ". . . one third of a nation . . ." the living newspaper on housing. This Theater Arts Monthly tap on the shoulder will be gone into a little more minutely at another time—and it is still true that " a word to the wise, etc."

For a long time now there has been reposing on my immaculate desk a copy of Cab Calloway's "Hepster's Dictionary," a glossary of the strange Harlem jargon used in the discussion of "swing" music. It has been my intention to compose a powerful piece for the paper confined exclusively of the bizarre words and expressions that Cab has assembled in print. Only one consideration has deterred me from this purpose. I can't make any sense out of the darned thing, any more than I can out of the gibberish being sung by that "scat" singer with Gene Krupa's band at the Earle.

However, hope springs eternal. I still think maybe I can do something with Chinese!

Rare Songs Are Insured for Trip

Insured for $1,000, a package of now rare ballads that all Paris was singing at the turn of the century was on its way from the French capital to Paramount studio today.

The package comprises some 200 songs from the library of Andre Charlot, noted former London impresario, who is working as technical adviser with Producer Albert Lewin on "Zaza." In response to her husband's request, Mrs. Charlot cabled from Paris that she had mailed the songs, after covering them with insurance.

Yacht Club Boys Valuable Bodies

The Yacht Club Boys, according to their own valuation, are worth more dead than alive.

Should any one of the group of song comics die or be totally incapacitated before the team finishes its current assignment in "Artists and Models Abroad," each of the other three would receive $25,000.

Just before they started work in the new picture with Jack Benny and Joan Bennett, the Yacht Clubbers took out a $75,000 business insurance policy payable to the firm on the lives and health of each of the quartet.

Warner Starlet Branches Out as Cowgirl

PRISCILLA LANE, cast opposite Dick Powell in the Warner Brothers' production of "Cowboy from Brooklyn," goes into training for her role with a little rough-riding. The chances are that her mount is a horse-chestnut! The picture will be coming along in due course to the Earle Theater.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, June 21.—Gene Autrey, the cowboy who sang his way to fame in Republic's pictures in the last year, has that indefinable thing called charm. He writes his own songs, yet doesn't know a note of music. Get's an idea for a tune, whistles it, and his friend, Johnny Marvie—who doesn't know music, either—puts it down. They both pluck a mean guitar.

HEDDA HOPPER

Their first song, called "That Silver-Haired Daddy of Mine," sold half a million copies. If I were a musician, all this would make me tear my hair out.

Gene has just smoked the pipe of peace with his studio and finished making "The Gold Mine in the Sky." He's one of the biggest money makers—gets the least pay. He's happy about present settlement. If they'd waited a month longer he might have been lost to pictures forever. He and his horse looked around for another means of livelihood. They found a picture theater in a little Oklahoma town and were ready to buy it. Had he done it, he'd have had more battling there than he's had in Hollywood—that is, if you can believe exhibitors' tall tales.

She sheriff in Nashville, Tenn., who handed him an injunction forbidding his making a personal appearance couldn't go home to his wife and sons for days—they wouldn't speak to him.

When he was a lad he used to take cattle to Chicago. While waiting around the railroad stations to unload, he became interested in telegraphy. Decided to master the instrument. He did, and was a telegrapher in Clairemont for several years. Met Will Rogers there. He didn't know him until he started to read the messages Will handed him. After sending it, Will told him stories. He got out the old guitar. That was ten years ago. Since then he's appeared in every State in the Union. He doesn't twirl a rope—says his horse is his main attraction and does everything but talk. Always has a couple of stooges. They work in all his pictures.

When selecting a story, he doesn't trust his own judgment. His wife, secretary, manager, intimate friends—all give it a going over. After which they hold a pow-wow, then tell the boys who know about such things what they think is the matter with it.

I asked if he trained women as he did his horses. "Don't know anything about women — been married seven years and still happy." His favorite woman on the screen is Myrna Loy. He doesn't understand the kind called glamorous. His favorite actors are Clark Gable, Richard Dix and Harry Carey. He puts out Gene Autrey hats, pistols in holsters, hair oil, shaving cream and men's perfume—the latter, made in Paris.

His most prized possession is a hunk of ore given him in Texas, containing $25 worth of gold. He dresses exclusively in cowboy clothes. And hopes the day will soon come when he can make his Westerns in color. Yes, sir, when you meet Gene Autrey, you've met a real guy.

Tom Potts, who may play "Golden Boy," was discovered by Warner's talent scout, Andy Lawler, on a bus in Seattle: Warners thought him good-looking, but—Harry Cohen signed him.

The newly furnished cabanas at the Coronado Hotel are so lovely you could give up your house and spend the summer in them.

Gregory Ratoff made a right nice job of introducing Jean Sablen, the new French singer, to the patrons of the Troc, who went for him, hook, line and sinker. Joe Schenck, with another Frenchie, Germaine Aussey, June Gale, Gene Markey and the Bill Goetzes at the ringside. Also the Charles Boyers, Mervyn LeRoys, Pan Bermans, Tyrone Power and Annabella in the same party—no, they didn't come together. Lieut. Gov. Hatfield, Bob Briskin and Ethel Merman, Walter Wanger and Jean Bennett.

Star Sits Down With His Setter

FRED MacMURRAY AND "JACK."

Evincing a strong love for pets, Fred MacMurray devotes a little time between scenes to his 6-month-old English setter. "Jack" was presented to him while "Men With Wings" was in production on the Paramount lot. The "wings" in the title probably suggested a bird dog as a present.

Bogus Prince Fails to Pass Own Film Test

'Mike' Ramanoff Becomes 'Writer,' Not a Star; Grapewin Wins.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 21.—There is in production at Twentieth Century-Fox a movie, "Ellis Island," which was suggested by that prince of fakes, Michael Romanoff, alias Harry Gerguson.

He said he thought that there would be a lot of drama in connection with Ellis Island and that it would be mighty nice if the studio would hire him to play himself. The studio liked the idea. It had the story written and it cast all the other actors, including Don Ameche, Arleen Whelan and Binnie Barnes. Then it sent for Prince Mike.

He arrived, all smiles, to play Prince Mike as only Prince Mike could do it, but after 30 years as an international phoney, he wasn't good enough to pass his screen test! The part is being played now by somebody else. Prince Mike still is on the pay roll, though. He's listed as a writer. He is, incidentally, a surprisingly ingratiatingly little man, in his late forties. You'd never guess that he's been guilty of all the good-humored skullduggery so far listed on his record.

A "Horse on You."

The mad Ritz brothers, Harry, Jimmy and Al, now are making a picture called "Straight, Place and Show," on the same lot. They are co-starred with a horse.

This beast is one of Hollywood's smartest. Tracy Lanyne bought him as a colt from the Burbank, Calif., chief of police, named him Zane, trained him to do tricks—and now collects $250 weekly for his services.

Zane even has a stand-in. Don't ask us why, unless it's for floss, because even when a horse isn't working before the cameras, he doesn't sit down to rest. He keeps on standing, just as he did while his picture was being taken.

There is some fine human trickery, too, in the business of making a horse do tricks.

Zane, for instance, is supposed to walk to a table on which are three apples, under each of which is the name of a horse. He must pick up one—thereby picking the horse on which the Brothers Ritz intend to stake their all.

We watched Zane do this trick. He walked to the table, looked the apples over carefully and then picked up the one on the extreme left. The Ritzes kissed him.

The apples weren't real. They were wood, painted red. Zane otherwise might not have been able to control himself.

From all appearances, he examined each apple carefully before selecting the left one. He really didn't. His trainer stood out of camera range and held some reins made of black silk thread. A gentle pull of the thread caused Zane to nuzzle each apple and finally to pick the one the director wanted him to choose.

How to Beat Depression.

Charles Grapewin, one-time General Motors executive and later right-hand man to W. C. Durant in the latter's attempt to start a rival chain of automobile factories, currently is appearing in Paramount's "Artists and Models Abroad."

He started his career as a circus acrobat, appeared on the stage for years and then settled down in the automobile business. He amassed $2,000,000, retired to a mansion in Los Angeles and prepared to spend the rest of his life doing nothing. The depression didn't harm him, but he did go into a stock pool in 1931 with a group of speculators and first thing he knew his $2,000,000 was gone.

"But it wasn't bad at all," he said. "For one thing, I found out that my wife could cook. I got me a job in the movies and that was profitable. It also has been fun. I've even continued to speculate.

"Maybe speculation isn't the right word. For instance, I bet myself that President Roosevelt would be elected in 1932. I also bet that he would repeal prohibition. And if he did, I asked myself, what would the whisky makers use for bottles?

"So I mortgaged my house and put every cent I had into Owens Glass at eight and a quarter. A few months later I sold out at 92. Then Roosevelt began helping out the farmers. I figured that if a farmer suddenly got hold of enough cash to pay off the old mortgage, his wife would look into the stone crock for her egg money, and start thumbing through the mail order catalogue. That also turned out fine.

Air Epic Gets Own Weather Reports

First-hand information on the weather will be furnished for Paramount's new Technicolor picture, "Men With Wings," via a new teletype machine in the studio operations department.

Dr. Irving B. Krick, of Pasadena, California Institute of Technology weather expert, who in the past has been informing the studio by telephone about weather-to-be on locations several hours before "shooting" time, will hereafter type his messages which will be received on the tele-typewriter at the studio a second later.

Krick's reports usually are given at 5 or 6 a. m. When he predicts inclement weather, the operations desk places cancellation calls with all the 250 departments at the studio which are interested in the productions.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, June 21.

SUCCESSION: The newspapers yesterday mentioned the names of Lehman, Secretary of State Flynn and Al Smith as possible successors to the late Royal S. Copeland. This is a strange aftermath to an inside story of 1933, when it became evident that Copeland opposed the New Deal . . . Roosevelt decided to get him out of the Senate by making him Ambassador to Germany—and Copeland agreed. Flynn was to replace him . . . But Lehman declared that, as a gesture of appreciation, he first would offer the Senatorship to Al Smith . . . The deal was called off when Al Smith indicated that he'd accept the job.

* * * *

AMBITION: Mary Dees is the young lady who completed the Jean Harlow role in "Saratoga"—the picture which was half completed when Miss Harlow died . . . Mary Dees, who was signed by M.-G.-M. at the time, hasn't worked in a movie since then, although she receives her salary every week . . . She was somewhat elated, therefore, when last week she received an official order from the studio. She opened the envelope and learned that it wasn't a new picture assignment. It merely directed: "Please stay out of the sun, because sun-tan doesn't photograph well."

* * * *

ROMANCE: Virginia Langdon, the daughter of Harry Langdon, the movie comic, heard from a newspaperman last night that her father had remarried again last week . . . "Gosh, I never knew that," Miss Langdon confessed . . . "Is that the only comment you have to make?" she was asked . . . "Well, I'm really surprised," she returned, "I thought I had enough step-mothers already."

* * * *

FAME: Mr. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., who expect to become parents next month, have decided upon the new baby's name . . . If it's a girl, she'll be named Ethel, in honor of her mother, the former Ethel duPont . . . If it's a boy, he'll be named in honor of Nicholas Van Martinson, one of the Roosevelt ancestors who was the first to settle in America. He'll not be named Franklin D. Roosevelt 3d—because F. D., jr., mindful of his own experiences, feels that a young man who bears such a distinguished name is handicapped.

* * * *

PUBLICITY: The Roosevelt-Clark wedding on Saturday was the most publicized wedding of the year . . . But last week Edith Derby, granddaughter of President Theodore Roosevelt, visited the Rainbow Room with Quincy Thorndike and was asked: "Are you going to the wedding? . . . "Wedding?" she coldly replied. "What wedding?"

* * * *

CHARITY: On June 28 a village fair, for the benefit of the Spanish Children's Milk fund, will be held at Washington Mews. One of the sideshows will be called "Lift the Embargo"—a variation of the old High-Striker game, wherein a prize is awarded to the hammer-swinger who hits the gong . . . The face on the mat at which the hammer is swung will be that of Neville Chamberlain . . . And the man who conceived the idea, and who is supervising the construction, is George Pershing—nephew of Gen. Pershing.

* * * *

CHATTER: When the Jimmy Hines case is tried, the names of prominent Bronx politicians will be mentioned in the evidence. They will be named as protectors of Dutch Schultz . . . There won't be any "Betty Boop" cartoons next year. Her creater will replace her with "Sally Swing" . . . The son of a famous publisher is offering $5,000 a year, for life, for the furtherance of American democracy . . . The duPonts are backing the production and distribution of 16 mm. movie films . . . The San Francisco Fair will buy all the 1915 cars extant, if any still can run.

TRIUMPH: Jack White and Pat Harrington, who appeared in Walter Wanger's movie, "52nd Street," were discussing that movie last night at their 18 Club . . . "Yes, you were in that picture," White accused, "but padded your part" . . . "I did not," Harrington protested. "I had only one line to say 'He went that way' " . . . "But you padded it," White returned. "You pointed."

Wedding or Career Issue for Player

Will Graeme McDonald, wealthy young San Francisco businessman, caused Harold Lloyd's new leading woman, Phyllis Welch, to forfeit the nonmarriage bond she posted some time ago with officials of the Lloyd company?

The question arose on the comedian's "Professor, Beware!" set recently, when McDonald paid the young actress a visit at the studio.

According to friends of the couple, McDonald makes a hurried airplane trip from the Bay City each week in order to spend some time during week-ends with the young actress, who has several weeks yet to go before she is freed from the nonmarriage obligation imposed by Lloyd.

Five Accused as German Spies and Their G-Man Nemesis

Spies

New York has now extended to Philadelphia, it was reported yesterday. There are a number of important aircraft factories in that area.

Lamar Hardy, United States Attorney in New York, this morning will arraign in open court 4 of the 18 defendants named in Monday's indictment. The four, who will be taken before Judge Vincent L. Leibell to plead to the indictments, have been in custody until now in default of $25,000 bail.

Fourteen in Germany.

Fourteen other defendants named in the three indictments, including two members of the high command of the German armed forces, are in Germany. It is not expected they ever will be apprehended.

The four who will be arraigned are Miss Johanna Hofmann, 26, hairdresser on the North German Lloyd liner Europa; Guenther Gustave Rumrich, 32, deserter and former sergeant in the United States Army; Erich Glaser, Army private stationed at the Army air base at Mitchel Field, L. I., and Otto Herrmann Voss, 29, German-American said to have been plagued by higher-ups in the ring as a mechanic in the Seversky Aircraft Corporation plant at Farmingdale, L. I.

There was speculation today as to whether any or all of the four prisoners would plead guilty to avoid disclosures which are bound to be made at a trial, probably to the further embarrassment of Germany.

Two Waived Immunity.

Miss Hoffmann and Glaser, in a last-minute gesture before the indictments were returned Monday, appeared before the grand jury waiving immunity, and told their stories. Rumrich and Voss have not appeared before the grand jury. It is known, however, that Rumrich has been communicative in his dealings with investigators and it is believed that Voss, likewise, has "talked."

Whether their co-operation with the Government was motivated by belief that mercy would be their reward should they plead guilty was a matter of speculation.

Leon G. Turrou, the Federal agent who headed the New York investigation, plans to write a series of newspaper articles on his work, it was announced.

Might Peril Convictions.

An official spokesman of the Department of Justice said that the department was deeply concerned about the contents of these articles and would most certainly want to see them in advance of publication.

Exposure of the G-Men's investigation, it was explained, might jeopardize the chances of obtaining convictions.

It was pointed out that Turrou, by revealing evidence and means of obtaining evidence which were described to the Federal grand jury that recently indicted 18 of the alleged spies, might make himself liable to contempt proceedings.

Otherwise, the Government has no legal protection against employes, or former employes, who exploit their activities for gain. About five years ago a bill was introduced in Congress for the purpose of prohibiting such enterprise but objectors charged it was unconstitutional, being an abridgement of free speech and free press, and succeeded in killing the measure.

Turrou said he was resigning partly because of his health, which had been impaired by overwork, and partly because he wished to devote more time to writing.

He is 42 years old and has been the highest-paid agent in the Federal Bureau of Investigation. His wife and two sons live at Arlington. The sons, Victor and Edward, are students at George Washington University.

A veteran of the World War (he was wounded twice while serving with the Marines in France) Turrou speaks seven languages. He has worked on every big FBI case since he joined the bureau ten years ago.

In the Lindbergh kidnaping case, he helped recover ransom money from the garage of Bruno Richard Hauptmann and persuaded Hauptmann to give samples of his handwriting for comparison with the ransom notes. Once he grew a beard and worked as a laborer to get information about sabotage on the dirigible Akron. He smashed white slavery rings in Connecticut and Baltimore, investigated election frauds in Indiana and the murder of several Federal agents in Kansas.

Germany Denies Espionage.

Berlin, June 21 (AP).—The German Official News Bureau tonight said "it is self-evident there cannot be any question of espionage in the United States by active officers of Germany's armed forces."

The communique was the first official acknowledgment here of espionage indictments returned in New York yesterday. Earlier a foreign office spokesman said in reply to questions on the case:

"We know nothing officially as yet, and in any case we regard the whole matter as an attempt to create a sensation in the United States for obvious reasons.

"It is quite evident that the allegations overshoot the mark. It is not so much a case of spies as spies imagined."

French Seize Documents.

Biarritz, France, June 21 (AP).—Thousands of documents relating to French defenses on the Spanish frontier were seized by secret police today as a prelude to what authorities called one of the biggest espionage investigations of many years.

Two Spaniards and a Frechman were arrested on charges of collecting frontier defense data. Police gave their names as Martin Olivers, Marquis de Relbalso, his secretary, Juan Pereja, and a Frenchman, Pierre Rottier.

The trio were arrested in a police raid on the Marquis de Relbalso's room in one of the biggest Biarritz hotels. The documents were found there.

Four Nannie Goats Go Avoyaging by Air to Capital

C. M. Barnard, of Herndon, Va., holds his four goats, all "nannies," which were flown from Alliance, Ohio, to the Capital yesterday to augment his dairy herd. The trip took four and one-half hours, and Pilot Bill Payne, shown in plane, took his first breath of fresh air in that time at the airport with the remark, "I bet I still smell guilty." The goats were nervous at the start of the trip but soon relaxed and seemed to enjoy the experience, their owner said.

Bodies in Wreck Hunted by Boats With Floodlights

By the Associated Press.

Miles City, Mont., June 21.—Searchers went out in boats late today and floodlights were mounted on a bridge in a widening hunt for additional bodies from Sunday's flood-wreck of the Milwaukee Railroad "Olympian," in which 42 persons were counted dead or missing.

Thirty-one bodies have been recovered and officials announced they had identified 25 of these.

Physicians said all of the remaining injured probably would live. Of 26 persons in hospitals today, they said only six would require more than another day or two of treatment.

U. S. Doctor Struck By Nanking Sentry

Shanghai (Wednesday), June 22 (U.P.).—Informed quarters here said today that John M. Allison, of the American Embassy staff at Nanking, had protested that a Japanese sentry slapped Dr. J. C. Thompson. Allison himself was slapped by a Japanese sentry several months ago.

The American doctor, attached to Nanking University, allegedly was hit while attempting to protect his ricksha coolie from a beating by the sentry. It was said that the Japanese consulate reported the soldier denied slapping Thompson, who was accused of interfering with the sentry's duties.

Lehman to Run For Copeland's Place in Senate

Lehman

President Roosevelt, who was Governor for two terms, with Lehman as Lieutenant Governor, Lehman in the last year has been regarded as no longer a favorite with the New Dealers.

His letter a year ago to Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, urging that the Senator vote against President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganizaztion plan, was hailed as one of the final blows to the President's proposals. This was followed by the Governor's insistence that the Federal Government was not doing its share in the matter of work relief, and his objection to price-fixing by the Guffey coal commission without a hearing. Then came his speech at the annual dinner of the New York State Bar Association, in which he warned against possible dictatorship in America.

Labor Party Obstacle.

At Albany not only was it expected that Lehman would receive the nomination, but a belief was expressed that his early announcement of his candidacy foreclosed competition, but in New York City tonight supporters of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, the American Labor Party and adherents of President Roosevelt immediately began consideration of a possible opponent to the Lehman candidacy for the Democratic nomination.

Among those first mentioned were Mayor LaGuardia himself, Nathan Straus, jr., Federal Housing Administrator; Justice Samuel I. Rosenman, of the Supreme Court, who was Roosevelt's counsel as Governor and prepared the President's State papers, speeches and press conference transcripts for book publication, and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and vice chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Hillman's nomination was mentioned as part of reported offer of a "deal" by which the American Labor Party, in return, would support the Democratic ticket.

"Switch" Opposed.

About 10 days ago, before Senator Copeland's death, President Roosevelt let it be known that he would not regard with favor a switch between Lehman and Senator Wagner, considered by the New Deal faction, under which Lehman would seek Wagner's seat in the Senate and Wagner, whose term expires at the end of this year, would run for Governor.

Friends of Mayor LaGuardia also opposed the switch and said that if it were attempted the Mayor would oppose Lehman for Senator. But on Lehman's announcement of his candidacy for the unexpired part of Copeland's term, which extends to 1941, Mayor LaGuardia had no comment to make.

The Lehman candidacy immediately started a wave of speculation on what attitude the President would take toward the man with whom he formerly was so closely associated, politically and personally.

"Before Chicago" Backer.

It was recalled that Lehman actively worked for Roosevelt's nomination at the 1932 Chicago convention, opposing those in the New York delegation who were for Alfred E. Smith, though Smith, too, was a close friend of Lehman.

Then, at the Democratic State convention of that year, Roosevelt successfully brought about nomination of Lehman, despite opposition of Smith and an upstate coalition.

The Governor had intended to retire at the end of his second term, but New Dealers induced him to run again on the plea that he would add strength to the Democratic ticket in the State. Several months ago he said he wanted to retire to private life at the end of this term. He formerly was a member of the internationally known banking house of Lehman Brothers.

In 1932 he carried New York State by record plurality of almost 1,000,000 votes.

His attitude, in case of election, also was a topic of speculation. Whether he would join with the group of conservative Democrats who also opposed the court reorganization plan, and killed it, was a matter for conjecture. The reported determination of the Administration to defeat at the polls this year all those who fought the court proposal led some to the immediate conclusion that the Administration would certainly run a candidate against Lehman.

Should Wagner be prevailed upon to run for Governor, Representative James Mead stood out as a possible candidate for his Senate seat on the Democratic ticket. Mead has been a consistent supporter of the New Deal.

All Souls' Young People To Attend Conference

The young people of All Souls' Unitarian Church will join with similar groups from Philadelphia, Lancaster and other cities, in sponsoring a four-day conference at Monterey Inn, Blue Ridge Summit, beginning tomorrow. Florence M. Angell, of Montclair, N. J., bequeathed $2,000, and Stephen Baxter, son of Prof. James P. Baxter, of Harvard, willed $1,000, were others sharing in the estate.

President Signs Spending Bill, Sets Radio Chat

Roosevelt

international affairs with Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to London, who visited him today.

Asked whether Kennedy's call made him cheerful, the President replied that it made him feel the same way he had felt for the last two or three years. The general international picture, he said, was not particularly a bright one, that all we could do is hope for the best.

Mr. Roosevelt's very busy day included receipt of a $1,010,000 check for use of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Mr. Roosevelt said he wished to call attention to the Commerce report's disclosure that 1937 national income—the income of all the people who earn money in the United States—was slightly higher than had been estimated last fall.

'37 Income 69.8 Billion.

He said the report showed this income actually was $69,800,000,000, compared with estimates of between $68,000,000,000 and $69,000,000,000.

The document also reported, the President said, that while the average wage of the full-time employed person was down last year 9 per cent below the 1929 average, the cost of living index in 1937 was 15 per cent below 1929.

That, he declared, was another way of saying that living did not cost a wage-earner as much of his income in 1937 as in 1929 and, therefore, the country was relatively better off in that respect.

Then, after quoting the new figure on national income, he said the figure for 1937 would have been $72,000,000,000 instead of $69,800,000,000 if it had not been for the slackening of business toward the end of the year.

Reads Relief Statement.

He began reading slowly to the perspiring newsmen a two-page statement on the finally approved relief bill.

Mr. Roosevelt said it was generally recognized today that economic and social welfare ought to go hand in hand.

This relief and works bill covers both forms of welfare, he said, adding that it permits a great program to get under way immediately.

It permits, he continued, a large amount of money to be spent for many different forms of assistance, not only to the unemployed and in getting wages out but also to agriculture, industry and to business.

Partnership Held Base.

The program is carried out, the President declared, on the principle of Federal participation in partnership with State and local agencies, almost wholly a partnership basis.

Practically all WPA work is that, all of PWA is that and so is the work of the National Youth Administration and others, he added.

Mr. Roosevelt said the $3,750,000,000 measure was a partnership bill.

On the public works end, he asserted, PWA was created as an experiment in 1933. He said the Administration recognized PWA's power but had not measured it at that time. Since then, he asserted, he and his aids had been gauging its merits.

Says Improvements Needed.

That is a new line, he added, declaring that in following it two things had been discovered—that cities and other public bodies still need a large volume of permanent improvements and that these localities are glad and able to assess themselves for more than half of the total cost of the improvements by going into partnership with the Federal Government.

The President added that it also had been determined that on PWA projects two and half workers are given employment in mines, mills, forests and transportation for every worker on the project site. Another illustration, he said, was that 36 cents out of every dollar goes to the construction pay roll on the job and 64 cents for producing and fabricating materials, generally at distant points.

Noting that last Thursday was PWA's fifth anniversary, Mr. Roosevelt said that in those years that agency had added all over the country 25,000 useful projects, thus releasing to industry over $2,000,000,000 for the purchase of materials.

Many Projects Approved.

He disclosed that he had been approving PWA projects for three weeks, in every case subject to signing of the bill and that on almost every project so approved, actual work would begin inside of 60 days. A total of $350,000,000 of projects have been signed by the President.

Sixty days, the President declared, would be the earliest since the contracts for work must be advertised 30 days and certain other routine followed to insure that the work will be done properly.

He added that the remainder of PWA's $965,000,000 provided in the lending and spending bill—or a good deal of it—would be allocated within the next two weeks.

Thus, he asserted, the bulk of PWA's money goes to work in the shortest possible time.

The President said that the same thing about Federal-local partnership on PWA holds true for the Works Progress Administrtaion's $1,425,000,000.

WPA to Start July 1.

WPA is now in gear, he said, and ready to go ahead July 1.

WPA projects, he concluded, will take care of, as far as possible, all available employable unemployed.

Answering questions after he finished reading the statement on relief the President said that all he knew or had thought about a special session of Congress to enact railroad legislation was what he had read.

The President said his fireside chat will be made from the old diplomatic room in the White House following his appearance at a dinner given in his honor by the "Little Cabinet"—the assistant secretaries and principal subordinate officers of Government departments.

Camering the Clientele:

Writer Nan Furness ringsiding at Wardman's Metronome Room . . . Capt. and Senora Enrique de Prieto on the Shoreham Terrace. Also Miss Olivia Ruth Nixon and Dallas Morgan Barr, very radiant as Barnee plays an advance edition of their wedding march. Also the Times Club, group of Utah women interested in current events, entertaining their husbands at dinner. Nice thought . . . Roger Peacock, noted local golfer, enjoying the Powhattan Roof. Likewise Mr. and Mrs. James Nichols, the latter blondely lovely in black and white . . . Newsman Frederic William Wile at the Madrillon. Also Maj. and Mrs. Ross B. Smith celebrating their twentieth wedding anniversary. Another two-decade celebration was that jolly reunion of the Business High School Class of 1918 . . . Chatting in the afternoon at Hi-Hat were Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Harold E. Doyle, former president of the Real Estate Board.

Mystery solved:

That scurrying of workmen around the Trans-Lux Building is a sign that a new cocktail room and restaurant will open there presently. It will be operated by Vincent J. ("Gal") Gallegher, manager of the King Cole Room.

An upswing of college atmosphere may be expected at the Anchor Room. Victor Sampson, notable football player of George Washington University, has just been appointed assistant manager.

Jimmy Bird, promotion manager of Mayfair, has just completed his first three years there. He's celebrating by going to the Schmeling-Louis bout tonight. And he'll celebrate more if he collects his bet that Schmeling will stay ten rounds.

Larry Funk lost his way three times getting out to Glen Echo first evening of his engagement, once finding himself on Foxhall road headed right back to Washington. He blames it on our circles and slant-angled avenues.

For top thrillage:

"Fifth Avenue Fantasy," as done by the Gaylene Sisters on the Shoreham Terrace. Has so much class it should be called "Park Avenue Fantasy."

Ernestine Gardner singing "I Married an Angel" in Wardman's Metronome Room. And you should have seen her boss, Johnny Slaughter, using a trumpet to blow out all but five of those 33 candles on his birthday cake on the first puff.

Tap dancing that sounds like the rolling of a trap drum by Neil and Delmar at Bamboo Gardens. Also Sar- Richardson's baritoning.

That swing-time dance novelty, tinged with adagio, being done by Marya and Martyn at the Lotus.

A quad-lingual warbler is Bert Bernath of the Rainbow Room. He sings in English, French, German and Italian. He's Rainbow's violinist, too, a tropical fish fancier and an amateur photographer. Versatility, Inc., should be his trade name.

Mayflower Lounge's orchestra has that fit, athletic look because they're constant tennis and soft ball players. They'd like to play regular baseball, but musicians can't take chances on injured hands.

Fight bulletin: The Schmeling-Louis hostilities will be broadcast this evening both on the Shoreham Terrace and in Wardman Park's Metronome Room.

Sallie Smith, who contraltos "Loch Lomond" so fetchingly at the Show Boat out Laurel way, is a Central High School girl. She broke into the entertaining business via an amateur radio program.

Rail Leaders Invite Unions To Pay Parley

level in history, while the railroad industry faces disaster. Neither conditions of general business, living conditions, nor the condition of the railroads justifies continuance of the present wage levels."

Rail union chiefs, on the other hand, had stoutly insisted that they will accept no wage cut, declaring that such a reduction would open the floodgates for a wave of pay-slashing throughout all industry.

Pay Higher, Revenue Less.

Enoch's statement said that average railroad wages are higher now than they were in 1929 "both in dollars and actual purchasing power" but that "on the other hand, the dollar invested in providing the plant and equipment which make railroad jobs possible is now earning only about one-tenth as much as it earned in 1929, and even in that year it earned less than 5 per cent, on the average."

"From the beginning of the depression in the fall of 1929," he continued, "railway traffic and earnings suffered sharp declines, but not until February, 1932, was there any reduction in railroad wages. The 10 per cent deduction agreed upon in that year was completely restored by April, 1935. In the summer and fall of 1937, railway employes received an additional wage increase, averaging about 8 per cent, as a result of negotiations conducted under the railway labor act.

Since this last increase in railway wages, business in general and the railroad business have entered upon a new phase of depression. The records to date show that railroads in 1938 handled 25 per cent less freight business than in the same weeks of 1937. Compared with 1932, the railroads are now hauling less traffic at lower average revenues per unit of traffic, paying higher taxes and prices, and paying wages which average, in hourly earnings, 20 per cent more than in 1932.

Unions Threaten Strike.

"The railroads believe that only through restoring a proper balance between railroad income and railroad expenses can we again have healthy railroads, able to do their full part in providing employment for as many men as possible, not only on the railroads but also in the industries from which railroads buy materials and supplies. Present wage rates, higher than conditions justify, and higher than the industry can afford to pay, make that impossible."

The rail unions' position is summarized in a statement from the Railway Labor Executives Association, issued at its recent meeting here, which said:

"If the railroad managements insist on going through with their attempt to cut employes' wages 15 per cent, the only ultimate result will be a Nation-wide strike.

"The railroad workers of America, already grossly underpaid, simply will not accept a wage reduction of any kind.

Borah For Interest Cut.

"They have already been heavy sufferers from the railroads' policy of putting the payment of interest to wealthy bondholders above decent living standards for their employes. The workers will not submit to any more victimization along that line. Any further attempt to injure their living standards will mean a fight."

Senator Borah suggested that the Government could agree to make RFC loans to railroads whose bondholders accepted reduction in their interest payments.

"The bondholders would rather have an assured 3 per cent than a 6 per cent return that they may not get," he told the Associated Press.

Meanwhile, there was continued talk of a possible special session of Congress to enact legislation to aid the financially stricken carriers. It was conceded, however, that considerable preparatory investigative work would be required before Congress would be in a position to take action.

Exercise Is Necessary After Baby's Arrival

By Ida Jean Kain.

THE ONE TIME in your life when exercise is a downright necessity is after the baby arrives. Your figure is at a critical stage and a brief period of rest should be followed by an exercise program to tone stretched muscles. If you do nothing to strengthen these flabby muscles is the belief that nature will take care of everything in due time, you may never again have a lovely figure.

Just at first you may appear so delightfully flat that you think you do not need exercise. Those stretched muscles, however, must be brought back to tone. Otherwise, in a few weeks they will begin to accumulate fat and the figure will continue to spread.

It may come as a brand-new idea that you can exercise soon after the arrival of the baby, but with your doctor's permission you can begin mild exercise some time during the first week. Some doctors believe that the sooner exercise is begun the better, and most obstetricians agree that you will be stronger at the end of the two weeks in bed if a few simple exercises are performed even during this recuperative period.

For the first week the exercises are very simple and consist mainly of raising the arms slowly overhead, bending the head forward on the chest, and raising the head and shoulders just enough to clear the bed. During the second week the exercise may be increased slightly and by the third week, if you are strong enough your exercise may be fairly active. Begin very gradually, performing the movements slowly and rhythmically. It is important that you relax completely between each movement. Not a single exercise should be attempted until it has been approved by your doctor.

Following is the type of corrective exercise which, in normal cases, may be started during the third week:

POSITION: Lying on back on bed, knees flexed and feet flat on bed.

MOVEMENT: Resting weight on soles of feet and shoulders, raise the abdomen and hips from the bed, pushing upward as high as possible. Later, fling the arms back of head as the hips are raised. Repeat not more than five times.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

When Secretly Engaged, Is Man Justified in Forbidding Fiancee to Enter Rival Admirer's Employ?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am engaged to a young woman employed in the same office with me. Until recently I had every reason to be sure of her because she is a lovely, mature woman, not a sentimental schoolgirl, and our engagement has entailed some sacrifices on her part. Our office is full of intrigue and for private reasons our engagement is a secret for the moment.

• • • •

An official in the office, unaware of her engagement, asked her for a date a few weeks ago. Although my fiancee declined the date on some excuse, and has not given him any since, she has allowed him to drive her home a few times and has lunched with him a couple of times. She told me that she did so only because she could get, through him, an inside knowledge of what was going on in the office and could learn things that would benefit both of us. She told me everything that transpired on each occasion and I have no reason to think she deceived me.

• • • •

Now, however, this official is about to get a much better job in another office and has been sounding her out on the proposition of making her his private secretary. He is separated from his wife and every indication points to his intention of trying to win my fiancee. It is imperative that she get a job elsewhere, anyway, and now she is talking about accepting this job with him. Except jokingly, she has given no indication that he means anything more to her than he has in the past.

• • • •

Should I put my foot down and refuse to let her take this position on the ground that it is incompatible with our engagement, as well as unfair to the other man who believes her free? Or am I simply starting at shadows and should I let the situation ride without interference? Please answer immediately. D. C.

He Lacks Veto Power.

DEAR D. C.: You do not possess the right to "put your foot down" on any decision—ranging from the most trivial to the most important—that your fiancee may choose to make concerning either her personal or her professional life. As her husband, you would possess a certain veto power in her affairs, but even then, that power should be most prudently and diplomatically exercised, with the idea in mind that she is your full partner and not your chattel.

• • • •

It appears that you are confusing engagement with marriage. You must realize that the period of engagement is a trial period merely; that no binding transaction has been effected; that each of you is, actually, as free as before to reconsider this tentative commitment to marry. The whole purpose of an engagement is to give the parties concerned an exclusive and socially recognized opportunity for discovering whether emotion has clouded judgment; whether they are genuinely compatible; whether they can pull together in double harness; whether they do see eye-to-eye on just such delicate situations as this one currently confronting you; or whether, on the contrary, they are—one or the other—such opportunists, or so little suited to each other, that the first major crisis which besets their path will reveal them to be strangers and antagonists.

• • • •

Frankly, there seems to be some reason to believe that your fiancee is an opportunist; but whether she is being an opportunist for her own gain entirely, or for the slightly more excusable purpose of achieving (expediently) greater good fortune to share with you, is definitely open to question. Any woman who uses one man as a means to an end, so to speak, invites suspicion concerning her dealings with all men—fiancee or husband included.

• • • •

Probably the fairest interpretation one can place on your fiancee's actions is to suppose that in her dealings with the aforementioned "official," she was animated at first only by a desire to make smooth the path for your two selves, through learning as much as she could of the executive lay of the land in the office. However, as time goes on, she may—no doubt does—find herself becoming more interested in that official as an individual as well as a candid, and rather distinguished, admirer. She would be less than human if she were not deeply flattered by, and warmly appreciative of, both his social attentions and his professional vote of confidence.

• • • •

I am inclined to believe she is more deeply interested in the man than she is prepared, at the moment, to have you know. You say: "Except jokingly, she has given no indication that he means anything more to her than he has in the past." That means, I take it, that (jokingly, of course,) she has indicated that he does mean something to her. Which brings one to the truism that "many a truth is spoken in jest."

• • • •

It is entirely possible that she would promptly exchange the bird in hand (yourself) for the bird in the bush (the "official") if she could have the latter on terms of matrimony. But it may be that she recognizes something she has no intention of letting you know, namely: That both the man's social attentions and his desire to have her as his personal secretary are merely the prelude, in his mind, at least, to an undercover intrigue. As a "mature" woman, she may wish to marry; may have betrothed herself to you as the most promising candidate of the moment and may now see a better chance in the offing, and be willing to play her own strategy off against his. In the meantime, she may not wish to lose you, reasoning that in the event she does not capture the "official" as husband, she can proceed with her original plan to marry you and utilize her contact with him to your mutual advantage.

• • • •

If she were head-over-heels in love with you and determined, with serene finality, to marry you and none other, I believe her first and irresistible impulse would have been to confide her marriage plans to this man who has so significantly favored her, most particularly after he had "sounded her out" on the possibility of entering his employ. The fact that she has not done so; that obviously she considers it unwise to introduce you into the picture in your true light, suggests that there is more in her mind, and to their budding relationship, than appears on the surface.

• • • •

To sum up, therefore, I do not believe you are "starting at shadows." I think there is evidence to indicate that your fiancee is playing both ends against the middle—even if it is nothing more serious than trying to make you jealous and hence more ardently appreciative of your good fortune in winning her promise to marry you. But I still do not believe you possess the right to issue ultimatums or lay down prohibitions. If you do not and cannot trust your fiancee's motives, the greatest service you can render your respective selves is to break the engagement. But if you are inclined to give her the benefit of the doubt; if you have a sneaking suspicion that you are at fault, through being unduly jealous and uneasy, then the wise thing to do is to suffer your jealous misery in silence, and let her play out her game (whatever it is) with the "official" in her own fashion. So long as a man isn't a completely blind fool in the hands of a coquettish or designing woman, the smartest strategy he can employ with regard to keeping her interest focused on him is to register a certain detachment concerning her relations with other men. M. H.

Tubbing Helps Cotton Live Its Fullest Life

Since cottons thrive on tubbing, there's no need to wear them once they begin to wilt. All they ask in return for long and faithful service is washing with soap and water before they become so badly soiled or perspiration-soaked that the fibers decay. A continuous lather of frothy soapsuds in the tub or washing machine cuts down on the time and effort required to wash cottons or any other fabrics clean.

White cottons can be scrubbed or boiled if they need it. Colors and prints are best washed separately in thick lukewarm soapsuds, and rinsed in lukewarm to cool water. Quick handling, without preliminary soaking, and drying in the shade are also wise precautions.

Sentimental Summer Frock

THERE are two reasons why you would attract attention in the Schiaparelli print frock shown above. First, because it has a design of meandering red hearts on a white linen background. Second, because it is made in a distinctive manner with small tucks around the waistline to give a full bodice effect and with the tucks repeated at the neck to give a soft and flattering line. Sleeveless and made on simple lines with no pleats or ruffles to bother about, it is guaranteed to be cool on the hottest day.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendenning.

How Your Skin Reacts

SUN BATHING, which should be in full swing in a week or two, is undoubtedly of benefit to health if performed sensibly, but in order to get the full benefits out of it, an understanding of the anatomy and physiology of the skin and the action of the sun's rays is desirable.

The skin consists of a layer of tough horny cells in which there are no blood bessels. The nourishment of this layer comes entirely from below, where there is abundant blood supply, as well as fat, hair follicles, lymph, sweat glands.

The upper layer, if we could separate it entirely, would be found dry and crackly like a piece of cellophane. It is kept moist and lubricated by secretions of the glands which pour out on its surface.

It is translucent and allows the sun's rays to seep through it, affecting the blood and fat beneath.

It is this upper layer, however, that gets sunburned. The "burn" is like any other burn, and destroys the cells. The lower layer responds to the destruction by bringing more blood to the part—that is, furnishing more nourishment to replace the destruction. That is what causes the red skin of sunburn.

If the burn is mild, the very top layer of cells is destroyed, the dead cells drop off. This is the "peel" of sunburn.

If the burn is deep, all the cells of the upper layer are destroyed in spots and the lymph from the lower layer of the skin fills in these damaged places, and that is the blister of sunburn.

Tan begins when the pigment cells of the skin begin to move in. The pigment of the skin resides in the lower layer of the skin. In very dark people and Negroes it may invade the lowest layer of the upper part. Pigment varies in different people and is increased or decreased according to circumstances. One circumstance which we are studying is the exposure to sun. The pigment increases and moves around, probably carried by blood, because if a piece of skin from a lighter part of the body is grafted on an exposed part, it turns darker.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, June 21.

FOR A LONG time this city has been the center of a "spy story," complete with such unhappy touches as enlisted men of the Army reported bartering certain military secrets for foreign gold. Yet up to a few days ago close students of the works of such yarn-spinners as E. Phillips Oppenheim were definitely dissatisfied with this spy story.

ALICE HUGHES

Frankly, it lacked the one indispensable figure for such international mazes—a girl, young, beautiful and preferably blonde. At last that missing link in the mysterious chain was produced before the jury hearing evidence, and Oppenheim addicts are at last satisfied.

The young lady is a very pretty creature named Eleanor Boehme, who is 25, a graduate of our own Hunter College, a model and journalist at various times. To make her entrance into the picture perfect, she is a heroine and not a dark villainess of the Mata Hari school, for reporters say she is giving evidence which will help the ubiquitous G-men completely scotch this dastardly plot against our national safety.

Eleanor lives with her father out in Elmhurst, Long Island, and it is even comforting to know that she is a member of the Alphi Xi Delta Sorority. There is something soothing about the mere fact that she is a Greek-letter sister, complete with pin, grip and high sign. I'm ashamed to say I know nothing about old Alpha Xi, but certainly one of its sworn sisters would do her best to save her country from human varmints. It's the Old College Try! So, with the entrance of pretty Miss Boehme, our spy story's cast of characters is complete, and may she succeed in hurling the rascals into our deepest and darkest dungeon!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Sally Rand, actress and bubble dancer who is always in and out of the news, has just done her good deed for the summer. Between professional performances of "Rain" at Mount Kisco, N. Y., she motored to Ossining and there gave her version of Sadie Thompson before the assembled students and hermits of Sing Sing prison!

• • • •

The annual outburst of flower shows and polo matches now takes place in the swankier sections of Long Island. For instance, the Nassau County Horticultural Society just wound up its Sweet Pea and Rose Show—an event which they tell me is a lulu, thought not up my alley. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field seem to have the island's rose prizes all tied up, winning practically every event in which they ran a bloom or two. But the show was stolen by an interloper in the form of a gigantic magnolia blossom with a wing-spread of over 20 inches. Several ardent flower-lovers fainted dead away at this inspiring sight, which was entered as a special exhibit by Mrs. F. E. Lewis, of Little Neck, the town whose name always draws a chuckle from visitors. As a rank outsider, it seems to me a pretty mean trick to stick in a whopping magnolia and steal most of the gasps from the Marshall Field roses!

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Morning After.

After a round of gayety:

When I wake up at 6, having gotten to bed at 3; when I find myself too tired to arise, yet as open-eyed as an owl; when I have the taste of quinine in my mouth and the feel of lead in my stomach; when I see lying limp and dead the pink chiffon dress that had seemed so alive and vibrant last night when I donned it; when I catch a glimpse of white gloves that are dingy, scent the essence of withered gardenias; when I lie there full of vague, muddy brown recollections, tasting the pistachio ice cream and wondering just what I said after the third Bacardi; having a hazy memory of smoke and din, unfinished sentences and shrieks of forced laughter—it is then that I have an insatiable longing for life that is dull, routine and artless.

• • • •

After a night that lasts far into morning:

I want to go somewhere and walk, far, far off from people; feel the sun overhead and the earth underneath, hear the orderly hum from the world of the insects; I want to smell freshly cut lawns, cedar after rain, weeds that are pungent; I want to see corn fields growing, fields of wheat waving, cows grazing in pastures; I want to watch squirrels as they dart around trees, see rabbits leap and pigeons strut proudly; I want to carry my thoughts from myself and from all people I know to a world that is alien to humans.

• • • •

After a whirl of partying:

I want to ride on a boat, look at sheets of illimitable water; or get up on a hill and stretch my eyes to a distant horizon; or sit in a darkened cathedral, enfolded in comforting silence; or even go to the top of a building and gaze at the toy world below me; take a trip on a train a street car or bus, or even get out the old atlas and find once again that myself and my crowd, and even my town, are mere specks in a world that is boundless.

• • • •

After too much high entertainment:

I want to eat scrambled eggs and fried ham or sage-seasoned sausage; string beans and salt pork, pigs' knuckles, boiled cabbage; cornbread or anything that brings no memories of canapes; I want to put on a freshly ironed gingham and get busy cleaning out cupboards, cultivate radishes or do anything that involves physical labor; I want a house spick and span with dotted Swiss curtains, glassware that is sparkling, floors that are spotless; everything in its place, sunlight streaming through windows; all about me the feeling that life has been scrubbed fresh and shiny.

• • • •

Yes, after a round of gayety:

I want to start a new life, settle down in a nice little nest of routine, always rising and dining, going and coming on the stroke of the clock; tuning in on the radio to the programs I like at the times that I like, and reading my paper according to schedule; and not being bothered with having to change all my plans to go to this or that party, and then get all behind with my work and feel rotten; but live simply and orderly and get something done—so I fold up my finery, put it carefully away, send my gloves to the cleaners. For life will be simple now, at least until the telephone rings and I hear myself saying, "Oh, you are? How perfectly grand! Oh, I'd LOVE to come to your party!"

Miss Frances Adalinda Nettleton Has Army Wedding to Lieut. Offer

Traditional Reception Follows Ceremony Replete With Swords, Uniforms; Couple Will Live at Fort Benning.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

A military wedding replete with glittering swords and trim "Army Blues" set off with gold insignia centered the social spotlight last evening when Miss Frances Adalinda Nettleton and Lieut. Robert Davis Offer exchanged vows at the Union Methodist Episcopal Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leigh L. Nettleton, of Washington. Lieut. Offer is the son of Maj. and Mrs. Orving H. Offer, of La Jolla, Calif.

Half an hour before the time set for the wedding most of the guests, including many high ranking Army officers, had assembled at the church, which was decorated with palms, ferns and gladioli. The first strains of wedding music were heard promptly at 8 o'clock. Accompanied by James McLain, organist, Mrs. Nancy Williamson, contralto, sang three solos, "O Promise Me," "I Love You Truly" and "O Perfect Love."

At the first notes of the wedding march from Lohengrin, the bridegroom turned out in formal full Army dress, and his best man, Lieut. Roy Heflebower, similarly attired, approached the altar, where they stood with the Rev. John R. Edwards to await the bride.

Down the aisle, two by two, came the ushers, followed by the bridesmaids, then the maid of honor, and finally the bride. Miss Agnes Evan, the maid of honor, wore a frock of peach marquisette, fashioned with a fitted bodice, puffed sleeves, and a billowing, floor-length skirt. A headband of African daisies and silver sandals completed her costume, and she carried a bouquet of delphinium and pink roses.

MRS. ROBERT D. OFFER.

Bridesmaids were Miss Nancy Ansell, Miss Carol Fries, Miss Margaret Sampson and Miss Jane Coulter. They were gowned in blue marquisette, cut on the same style as Miss Evans', and they wore head bands of African daisies. Their bouquets were of talisman roses.

Coronet of Lace Gift of Godmother

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of antique bridal satin made on princess lines. An unusual period effect was noted in the floor-length paneled front, made in a quilted pattern that started with a wide rever at the high neck and tapered to a narrower width at the bottom. Gauntlet cuffs to match the front paneling finished the close-fitting sleeves, and a long square train completed the gown.

The bride's tulle veil was attached to a coronet of Belgian lace that has been worn by the bride's godmother at her wedding. Fold on fold of tulle swirled over the long train.

All the ushers, the best man and the bridegroom were members of the 1938 graduating class at the United States Military Academy. Following the ceremony, the ushers unsheathed their swords and formed the traditional arch beneath which walked the bride and bridegroom. Ushers included Lieut. James Lynch, Lieut. George Bosch, Lieut. George Bixby, Lieut. Harold N. Moorman, Lieut. Clifford Riordan, and Lieut. Earle Shiley.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents. Members of the wedding party received with the bride's mother, whose pansy blue lace dress was set off with a corsage of roses. Mrs. Offer, mother of the bridegroom, also assisted in receiving. Her frock of dusty rose chiffon was worn with a corsage of gardenias.

Among guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. William Batie, of Salt Lake City; Lieut. and Mrs. William Prince, of Scranton, Pa.; Mrs. Blanche Arissinger and Miss Mary Arissinger, of McConnelsberg, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Emmett Annis, of Los Angeles, Calif., and the parents of the bridegroom.

Newlyweds at Dance Following Reception

After the reception, which, like the wedding, was carried out according to tradition, members of the bridal party—including the principals—went to the Army and Navy Country Club to dance. Later, Lieut. and Mrs. Offer left on a short wedding trip. Her traveling costume was navy blue alpaca with white accessories and a corsage of orchids. Upon their return the couple will visit briefly with the bride's parents at their home in Sherwood Forest and then motor to southern California. They will make their home at Fort Benning, Ga.

Lieut. Offer attended Cornwall Preparatory School before entering the Military Academy at West Point. The bride attended Western High School and George Washington University. She is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha Sorority. On her paternal side she numbers among her ancestors Francis Eaton, a Mayflower passenger; Roger Williams and the famous Wheeler family, of Concord, Mass. Noted ancestors on her mother's side include John Morton, a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The former Miss Nettleton and Lieut. Offer have been widely feted in the past few days, Climaxing a round of parties for them was the dinner given by Maj. and Mrs. Offer on Monday evening at the Shoreham. The event followed their wedding rehearsal.

Ambassador and Lady Lindsay Hosts to English Speaking Union

Even Weather, Rainy Though It Seemed for Natives, Is Perfectly in Keeping at British Garden Tea; Many Notables Present.

By Elizabeth Ford.

It's only one step from Massachusetts avenue to Rupert Brooke's vicarage garden in Grantchester . . . from the traffic-snarled streets of Washington to the sedate and columned corridors of Buckingham Palace. It's only one step to the British Embassy where yesterday afternoon Ambassador and Lady Lindsay were at home to the members of the English Speaking Union.

Even the weather was perfect for a British garden party . . . sunshine followed by drops of rain, and then sunshine again.

Guests were greeted first on the wide porch of the embassy, looking out on the formal garden, by Sir Ronald Lindsay, who then ushered them on to Lady Lindsay at the top of a short flight of stone steps, leading past rose bushes to the orange and green awning of the marquee. She wore a simple afternoon frock of mingled green, yellow and gray and a beige hat.

Guests Enjoy English Tea

Everywhere at once were Miss Irene Boyle in wedgewood green, and the secretary of the English Speaking Union, Mrs. Bruce Wallace, who wore a dark blue dress with accents of white.

Among the early arrivals were Mrs. George Maurice Wallace, attired in blue and white and wearing a broad-rimmed hat, trimmed with a perky blue veil. Accompanying her and wearing a frock of green, was her daughter, Miss Miriam Patricia Morris, who will start her debutante season early at a supper and dance to be given on Saturday evening at Widehall, the Eastern Shore home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard.

With Dudley Harmon

MRS. WARREN DELANO ROBBINS, lavender-haired adviser to the State Department on interior decorating problems, is really going to "get away from it all" this summer. She will spend her month's leave at the Delano homestead, Fairhaven, Mass., than which there is no quieter place.

DUDLEY HARMON

Fairhaven is near the sea town of New Bedford; is located on the Fairhaven River and used to be a whaling center. It still retains all its old charm. The Delano house belongs to Frederick Delano, uncle of the President, and is allowed to stand empty except in summer, when various members of the family use it for vacations. Mrs. Robbins will spend August there and will be joined by her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander C. Forbes, of New York, and several grandchildren.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Peter Finds a Fiddler.

Regard none whom you meet with scorn,
Because you think them lowly born.
—Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit, he of the long ears and unsated curiosity, sat just outside the dear Old Briar Patch. He had nothing to do. This was, of course, nothing unusual with Peter. He seldom has anything he really must do excepting eat. If there is any one more happy-go-lucky I don't know who it is. It was late afternoon. The Merry Little Breezes, children of Old Mother West Wind, had paused to rumple Peter's coat and blow in his long ears. They are very fond of Peter and love to tease him a little. Now Old Mother West Wind had gathered them into her big bag and taken them away to the Purple Hills for the night. Peter was trying to decide whether to visit the Green Forest or go over to the Old Pasture or run over to Farmer Brown's garden as soon as the dusk settled over the Green Meadows. He was waiting for this.

"Ha!" exclaimed Peter, and he pricked up his long ears. "As I live a cricket is singing; the first one I have heard this summer."

"As you live a cricket isn't singing," declared Chewink the Towhee, who is himself an excellent singer. He was scratching among the leaves just within the Old Briar Patch just back of Peter.

"I guess I know the song of a cricket when I hear it. I've heard it often enough," retorted Peter indignantly.

"I'll admit that you probably have often heard crickets, but not singing. You couldn't have heard them singing for the simple reason that they don't sing," stated Chewink flatly.

Peter stared at Chewink. "What are you talking about?" he demanded.

"Crickets," replied Chewink.

"Are you deaf? Don't you hear that one singing?" cried Peter.

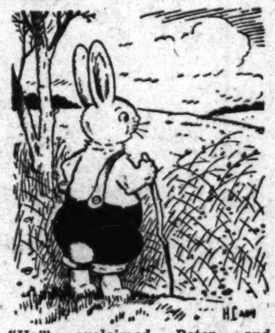
"No," replied Chewink. "No, I don't hear one singing. Singing is done with the voice this way." He threw back his head and sang. "Crickets can't sing any more than you can," he continued. "They are fiddlers, not singers."

"How do they fiddle?" demanded Peter.

This Chewink didn't know. All he was sure about was that crickets do not sing. He was positive of this. He repeated it.

"I don't believe it," declared Peter flatly and most impolitely.

"Some people never do believe the truth when they hear it. Go find that cricket and find out for yourself if he sings," snapped Chewink, and began to make the leaves fly as he scratched among them in search of a light meal before retiring.



"Ha!" exclaimed Peter, and pricked up his long ears.

"That's a good idea, I will," retorted Peter, and at once began to move off in the direction of the sound which he still was sure was the voice of a cricket. "The idea of saying that that cricket isn't singing. Chewink doesn't know what he is talking about," he muttered.

He had thought to go directly to the spot where that cricket was, but he found that this was not so easy as he had thought. Sound often is difficult to place exactly, and Peter found it so now. When he drew near to where it seemed to come from it ceased. He sat patiently for some time before he heard it again. When he moved toward it the same thing happened again. This happened several times, but each time Peter felt that he was nearer to the object of his search.

At last, after an unusually long wait, the sound seemed to come from almost at his very feet. There was a flat stone and about the size of one's hand and just in front of one edge of its sat the little black musician. He was cleaning one of his long antennae. He was drawing it through his mouth very slowly and even while it was no more than half way through he suddenly lifted his wing covers and immediately Peter heard the familiar notes. How could that cricket sing with his mouth full? He couldn't. Perhaps Chewink was right after all.

Dentist Asked To Help Solve Md. Mystery

Murder

It was hoped Styles would be able to lift some clew to the woman's identity from her fingers.

"Missing" Files Fruitless.

Carl and Corporal Charles W. Magaha, of State police, spent much of today in Washington and Baltimore searching gallery photographs and pictures and files of missing persons without success. A possibility that the woman had been identified among the missing persons files in Washington collapsed when the missing woman was located there.

(The officers visited two addresses in the northwest section of Washington. They declined to reveal the names of the persons interviewed, but said both visits were fruitless. Then they departed suddenly for Baltimore on an errand they declined to discuss.)

Fight Theory Held.

Even the manner of the woman's death remained an unanswered question. Dr. Page I. Jett, of Prince Frederick, who performed an autopsy, advanced four theories in case the woman was murdered and one to account for a possible suicide. He said she might have been strangled, suffocated or killed with an overdose of ether or chloroform. Possibly, though not probably, he said, she might have swallowed a quick-acting poison and have fallen already dead into the sluggish creek.

Dowell said authorities were considering the possibility of an attempted abortion, such as that which killed Cleo Sprouse in Charlottesville, Va., last year, but that they "haven't given up any of the other theories." These included the possibility she might have been killed in a fight and that her death might have been planned in cold blood and executed as coldly.

The theory of death during a fight appeared partially borne out by testimony of several persons at North Beach that they saw a woman answering the description of the dead woman being beaten in an automobile with District tags there Friday night. They said the man striking her was so fat "he had to stop every time he hit her and pull his pants up."

Yesterday two young Dares Wharf truck drivers told Dowell a woman answering the same description hailed their truck on the Southern Maryland boulevard about 10 p. m. Friday 150 yards from the creek and frantically tried to wave them down. They said she was running up the road from an automobile with District tags by which a man was standing. They said the machine was of a model several years old and had a square trunk on the rear.

Believed D. C. Resident.

"The odds are the woman lived in the District of Columbia," Dowell told The Post tonight. "We have no missing persons in Calvert County and have had none reported from this section.

More cars with District tags pass through here than any other. It is very likely she came from Washington."

Earlier in the day, Dowell had asked that an inquest, called in Calvert County Courthouse by Magistrate W. W. Duke, acting coroner and correspondent for a Washington afternoon newspaper, be postponed indefinitely because of evidence insufficient to justify a verdict.

"Developments," he told the coroner, "have not been as speedy as we hoped. Therefore, I request that this inquest be continued an indefinite time. Then I hope we can present evidence which will enable the jury to bring in a verdict which will amount to something. Now we cannot give evidence which will lead to any definite result."

Dress Offers Clew.

All of yesterday and today men, women and children trooped silently through the little building at Mount Harmony, where the body lay. From none did a sign of recognition come.

The woman's clothing offered one faint clew which today had borne no fruit. On the dead woman's underwear was the label of a Washington department store, but none of the store's sales force had identified the garment. The dress suddenly appeared to be another possible clew.

An extra saleswoman at another Washington store said she sold a dress identical with the blue garment printed with red flowers to a woman six weeks ago. Her customer, she said, answered the description of the dead woman.

Morgenthau and Eccles Agree On Bank Rules Liberalization shall Diggs. But Eccles made clear the final report also has Federal Reserve Board approval.

No legislation is needed to give force to the new uniform rules, once they are approved by the President. Copies of the report will be sent to State banking officials.

Jones at Conference.

Sitting in at the conference was Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, whose agency is the largest holder of bank stocks. Others present, besides Eccles and Morgenthau, were Ronald Ransom, John K. McKee, Ernest G. Draper and M. S. Szymezak, Federal Reserve Board governors, and Cyril B. Upham, assistant to Morgenthau.

Dealing with the technical subjects of loan classifications and security appraisals, the new regulations would affect bank loan policies by determining what loans bank examiners may adjudge good assets.

To Revise Loan Ratings.

Proposals pending before the interdepartmental committee were said to provide that the present loan classification captions of "slow," "doubtful" and "loss" be eliminated, and classifications hereafter be by Roman numerals. Closer definitions of the classifications would be provided in the bank examination reports so that misunderstanding as to their meaning can be avoided.

Original proposals, understood in one quarter to have been largely followed in the final agreement, would permit valuation at cost, without regard to market prices, of securities holding the three highest credit ratings, and other rated and unrated securities of equivalent credit status.

In bank examination reports, net depreciation in general market obligations of the fourth highest credit rating and in Group II securities would not be classified as "estimated loss." But the depreciation would be deducted in computing a bank's net capital. Net appreciation would be disregarded. The market price of such securities would be noted.

Speculation Penalized.

Net depreciation in so-called Group III and Group IV securities would be classified as "estimated loss" and deducted from net capital computation, with net appreciation disregarded and the market price noted.

The original plan also would require banks to establish and maintain adequate valuation reserves against their security accounts. Until losses have been charged off and adequate reserves established, profits from the sale of securities would be available only for establishment of such reserves.

Speculative trading by banks in the bond market would be subject to criticism and penalty as under the present policy of the examining groups.

Business Loans Encouraged.

One of the points at issue was whether examination reports should contain a complete list of banks' security holdings and the nature of the information concerning them presented to the directorates of banks examined.

The revised rules are partly designed to encourage banks to finance local enterprises by permitting purchase of some types of small local issues which they cannot buy under present restrictions. Removal of the stigma of present "slow" loan classifications it was suggested would further encourage banks to make long time business loans.

Details and mechanics of putting the new rules into effect have not been worked out, but Chairman Crowley, of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, indicated it would take 30 days to put them in operation.

year's seminar have cut traffic death rates 29 per cent.

And during the last 23 weeks, delegates were told, 128 major cities across the country have shown a 19 per cent decrease in fatalities as compared to the same period in 1937.

Cites Rail, Air Rules.

"The highlight of this safety review," said John W. Darr, vice president of the Commercial Investment Trust Co. and trustee of its safety foundation, "will be to attempt to impress upon the news executives and specialists the importance of sound and workable rules governing traffic control.

"Much of the safety of rail and air travel," he continued, "can be attributed to the uniform rules for movement of trains and planes. Thus, it would seem desirable that States and cities, now largely dependent upon the trade and travel expenditures of car owners, give thought to simplifying plans for traffic handling."

Townsendite Cites Victory in Florida

Los Angeles, June 21 (AP).—Political success of the Townsend old age movement in Florida was cited to the third national Townsend convention today as an example of what "hard work" will do toward gaining adoption of the general welfare act, which embodies the Townsend plan.

F. Manley Goldsberry told the several thousand delegates that Florida Townsend clubs in May "elected United States Senators and Congressmen from every Congressional district in that State who will be loyal supporters of the Townsend plan in Congress."

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Mrs. Joe Kennedy . . . big help

At an official dinner Vice President Garner sat next to Mrs. Roosevelt and spent considerable time urging her to suggest to the President that he abandon his semi-weekly press conferences at the White House.

* * * *

Mr. Garner thought some of the by-products of the press sessions had been unfortunate, and that once every two or three months would be often enough.

* * * *

"I have urged this on you as strongly as I can," said Mr. Garner in conclusion, "but I'm afraid it won't do any good."

"I'm afraid it won't," said Mrs. Roosevelt sweetly.

* * * *

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: An attache at one of the legations is saying that the German Embassy here has a list of German-Americans with relatives in Germany, and that this list is very useful in propaganda and espionage . . . They're vulnerable . . . And usually innocent. But a great deal of pressure can be applied by hints of what might happen to parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters, aunts and uncles and cousins back in Germany if certain Nazi suggestions aren't listened to. It is a cruel pressure on some of our finest American citizens.

It is notorious that the males at summer places are mostly dewy youngsters and doddering oldsters, and that makes Washington's diplomatic attaches doubly precious prizes for debs and their mamas.

There's a constant tug of war among the lonely ladies to drag off the diplomatic bachelors or semi-detached males to Long Island or New England seaside grottos or Catskill chalets.

* * * *

Consequently, some 50 or 60 of the polished embryonic Talleyrands are assured of free board and room for as much of the summer as they can desert their onerous posts . . . Such eligibles as Decio de Moura, of Brazil, who can also do the big apple, are doubly in demand to adorn the more exclusive summer landscapes.

* * * *

Southerners still like their political oratory long and flowing; a two hour speech is always better than a one hour speech, so the full flavor can pervade the audience.

One of Gov. Happy Chandler's campaigners in the Kentucky melee for the Senatorship (a bluegrass judge) recently orated for more than an hour and then sat down. But the audience would have none of that; they urged him to continue, and he proceeded for another hour, almost effortlessly.

In the north a speaker begins to lose votes by the minute after he passes the half-hour mark.

"—Joe's troupe of campaigners"

As Ambassador Joe Kennedy returns from London, he is still a presidential dark horse . . . And, to mix the metaphor, he has no strikes on him . . . What's more, all the kinetic Kennedys (and especially the beauteous Mrs.), would be a tremendous asset in a campaign . . . Quite a few in Washington think he is one Catholic who could be elected President.

* * * *

A mental picture of the White House with nine or ten Kennedys galloping about is most beguiling.

One question arises: All of the dynamic Joe's jobs have been short haul jobs, when he was called in for emergency treatment. He has not been exposed to the rigors of the long pull in any of his assignments. He wades in, lays about him, and goes on . . . What could he do in a long pull? . . . His personality is tops; it compares quite well even with The Chief's.

* * * *

Senator Nye is cherishing a quaint telegram from Gov. Langer, of North Dakota, who is opposing him for his seat in the Greatest Deliberative Body . . . Hearing that Nye was planning to come home and plunge into the campaign on the windy plains, the crafty Langer telegraphed him to remain in Washington. He promised that he would take no undue advantage, if Nye remained on the Hill to wrestle with the big bills.

But Senator Nye pocketed the telegram and went home anyhow.

Plaster Fall Injures 10 at Graduation

Large Chunks Plunged Into Crowd Leaving Cardozo School.

Panic Narrowly Averted; Accident Is Second in Six Weeks.

Ten persons were hurt at Cardozo High School last night when a chandelier and a large panel of plaster dropped from the ceiling upon a crowd leaving the school after graduating exercises.

The audience of 800 was slowly moving from the second-floor auditorium down to the entrance lobby of the 34-year-old structure at Ninth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest, when about 40 square feet of plaster crashed without warning at the foot of the stairs near the front door.

As the heavy chunks of plaster fell, carrying a heavy glass light with them, men and women screamed and pushed to avoid being hit. Two children were hurt in the crush, but most of the injuries were ascribed to falling plaster.

Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent in charge of colored schools, who was standing 10 feet from the scene of the accident, declared, "If a few of us hadn't rushed into the crowd and pulled the injured people out, there might have been a real panic."

Six weeks ago, several Cardozo children were injured when plaster fell in a corridor a few yards away.

"I am going to insist that the Board of Education have all the ceilings of the school rebuilt at once," Wilkinson declared. "I intend to take up this matter with them, immediately."

The injured were treated at Freedmen's Hospital. Seven had been sent home at a late hour last night. Those kept at the institution were: Mrs. Edith Roberts, 34, of 1744 Seventh street northwest; Ruth Flagel, 9, 1015 Maryland avenue northeast, and Theodore Peyton, 40, 486 I street southwest, all colored.

Harvard and C. U. Held Beneficiaries Under Capps Will

Catholic and Harvard universities are to be beneficiaries of the estate of the late Admiral Washington Lee Capps, it was revealed here yesterday by his widow, Mrs. Edna Ward Capps, 1823 Jefferson place northwest.

The disclosure was made when Mrs. Capps asked the Board of Tax Appeals to redetermine a $32,689 deficiency in estate taxes assessed against property left by her husband, who died in 1935. She informed the board that under her will $205,212 would be left to Catholic University and the president and fellows of Harvard.

Admiral Capps, she said, had directed that the University of Virginia and Catholic University be beneficiaries unless her will named other educational institutions. The Internal Revenue Bureau contended the directions left her opportunity to leave the money to other than public institutions.

The girl is Anna Mitchell, daughter of Miller Mitchell, chief of a tribe camping near Herndon, at Gum Springs near Mount Vernon and at other places in the county.

Co-operatives Back G. H. A. in Legal Contest

Brief Supports 'Health Contracts;' Move to Kill Suit to Be Heard.

The Association of Medical Co-operatives yesterday came to the support of the Group Health Association, Inc., on the eve of a hearing by Justice Jennings Bailey of motions to dismiss a suit brought by GHA to clarify its legal status.

A brief was prepared by the co-operatives for filing in the court today, when Justice Bailey will hear representatives of the United States Attorney's office and the corporation counsel's office argue for dismissal of the suit.

GHA seeks to prevent the United States Attorney and the superintendant of insurance from prosecuting it on charges of practicing medicine and engaging in the insurance business without legal authority.

The brief, prepared by A. J. Isserman and Martin W. Brown, counsel and executive secretary of the Medical Co-operatives Association, asserts the questions before the court will seriously affect the health and welfare of hundreds of thousands of persons throughout the United States.

Rapid development of medical science has made imperative adoption of the device of contract practice in medicine as a medium for more adequate medical care, the brief adds.

"Contrary to the trend in many other human activities," the brief stated, "the mechanization of medical science has generally increased costs rather than decreased them.

"The members of the G. H. A. seek to solve their pressing medical needs by self-help under a plan favorable to themselves, reasonable to the physicians with whom they contract, within the framework of the law and not in violation of the basic principles of medical ethics," the brief concludes.

4-H Clubs Urged To Help Prevent Fires in Forests

Fires that sweep American forests were described by H. N. Wheeler, Forest Service lecturer, to 4-H Club delegates in annual national encampment here yesterday. He urged them to enlarge club activities to aid in preventing such destruction.

In the afternoon, the 169 rural boys and girls visited the White House and had their pitcures taken on the south lawn. This afternoon they will go to Mount Vernon and, back at camp, will close their stay in Washington with the traditional candle lighting ceremony.

Last night, after dinner at the Commerce Department cafeteria, the annual camp party was held in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Better Business Bureau's Director Reports on Local Rackets.

Joseph W. Marshall, director of the Better Business Bureau, explained in his annual report yesterday how the bureau has helped in reducing financial losses to Washington consumers.

Marshall's report dealt with various unfair devices during the past year, many of which could called rackets, and the steps taken to suppress them.

It was also reported that 3,891 inquiries about financial matters have been received during the year.

Investigation showed, Marshall said, that local investors asked to buy interests in prospective oil fields alone often paid more than 20 times the value of the property.

Men, Women and Children, Headed by Police Inspector Edwards and Gen. Cox, March to Open V. F. W. Convention.

Disregarding a steady drizzle, nearly 10,000 residents of the Brookland-Woodridge section of Washington turned out last night to see and applaud a parade opening the annual department convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Headed by Police Inspector L. I. H. Edwards and Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, grand marshal, the parade included 2,500 gaily dressed men, women and children who marched past cheering spectators from Rhode Island and Eastern avenues northeast via Franklin street to Twelfth and Perry streets northeast.

In the reviewing stand at Twelfth and Monroe streets were David B. Herman, department commander, V. F. W.; Millard W. Rice national legislative officer, V. F. W.; the Rev. Howard Snyder, department chaplain; Mrs. Adelaide Grant, department president of the ladies' auxiliary, and seven judges, headed by Theodore S. Grape, president of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, and including presidents of six northeast citizens' associations. Inspector Edwards and Gen. Cox stepped from the line of march to watch the parade go by, at the stand.

They saw strutting band leaders, laughing veterans carrying their canes as though they were guns, stiffly marching women, tin-helmeted color guards and American flags.

With 50 units participating the parade included the Fifth Battalion Fleet Marine Corps Reserve, headed by Lieut Col. Harvey L. Miller, and detachments of the District National Guard, led by Col. John W. Oehmann.

Next came the Veterans of Foreign Wars themselves, including one exuberant post that sang "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here" as it passed the grand marshal.

A strange note was struck as a Twelfth street bus, seemingly oblivious of the parade, bucked the line of march in an effort to maintain its scheduled route.

Following the V. F. W., a division composed of other veterans' units marched by. Their brilliant hues were rivaled, however, by the division of civic, fraternal and patriotic organizations.

In this section were large detachments of smartly marching Jobs Daughters in various types of lavender and white silk uniforms. Rear guard of the division were the Police Boys Clubs, headed by their brightly dressed band, that boasted a wide-eyed and very diminutive saxophonist.

After the parade, a street dance was held, despite the rain. The festivities were sponsored by the Brookland-Woodridge Business Association, of which R. W. Parry is president.

The convention will continue this evening at John Burroughs School. John L. Fowler is general chairman and John W. Wimer is chief of staff, V. F. W.

Moore Is Reappointed To Smithsonian Board

President Roosevelt has signed a bill reappointing R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department, to membership on the board of regents of the Smithsonian Institution, the White House announced yesterday.

New Precinct Organization Set for July 1

'No. 13' to Be Split Off From No. 2, Brown Announces.

Establishment of a new police precinct and the naming of a new captain, four lieutenants and six sergeants will take place July 1, Maj. Ernest W. Brown said yesterday.

Maj. Brown would not name the men slated for the promotions but indicated that he will follow the usual procedure, selecting for promotion the men who head the civil service lists.

The new precinct to be established—No. 13—will be created to lift the burden of work in the Second Precinct. The change will split No. 2 and the new precinct will maintain quarters in the Second Precinct station at Ninth and U streets northwest.

Much speculation was taking place within the department concerning the pending promotions. Maj. Brown said his recommendations will be forwarded to the Commissioners for approval June 28.

Lieut. Oscar Letterman, Fourth Precinct, heads the civil service list for captaincy. It is believed he would remain at the Fourth Precinct and that Capt. Jeremiah Sullivan, present commander of that precinct, will be placed in charge of the new precinct.

The four men who lead the list of sergeants eligible for promotion are Detective Sergt. Clyde N. (Smiley) Strange, homicide squad; Acting Lieuts. John E. Scott, director of the Police Boys Clubs; Thomas Mason, hack inspector, and Sergt. John L. Norris, First Precinct.

Privates eligible to be promoted to fill vacancies left by the appointment of lieutenants are Ray Aggleson, Sixth Precinct; William H. Hinson, Third Precinct; Thomas C. Kelleher, Eighth Precinct; Maurice Prestell, Second Precinct; Detective Joseph P. Comiskey, Fourth Precinct, and Acting Sergt. George C. Deyoe, vice squad.

With the promotions also will come the appointment of a detective sergeant to fill the vacancy left by Strange, and a precinct detective.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, will forward his recommendations to Maj. Brown this week, it was said.

Charges against nine C. I. O. members of violating a health ordinance in distributing handbills at the navy yard June 6 will be dropped, Assistant Corporation Counsel Oliver Gasch announced yesterday. 18 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, JUNE 22, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, June 21.—"The great diamond fraud of 1938," that's what they're calling the Zeke Bonura-Joe Kuhel deal in Chicago. And that aptly describes the deal which was supposed to involve the genuine stuff with which pennants are won.

POVICH

Thus far the trade has taken all the importance of a trade of nothing for zero. Bonura was supposed to boster the Nats' attack. He hasn't. Kuhel was supposed to bolster the White Sox defense. He has, but at terrific cost. Kuhel has driven in only five runs for the Sox this season . . . The Washington bosses were wildly exultant when the deal was made last March. Bonura was just the man they needed, they said. They were willing to sacrifice a bit of defense around first base for the power of Bonura's bat.

In Chicago Jimmy Dykes had serious designs on the 1938 pennant. He believed a defensive club could win it. He visioned Kuhel and his artistry around first base as the exact prescription for the White Sox. And Kuhel had always hit well in Comiskey Park, where the Sox play 77 of their 154 games.

• • • •

So the deal was made. And now, with nearly half of the season expired, both clubs find themselves apparently gypped. Bonura's fielding is even worse than Bucky Harris had supposed and Kuhel's hitting is no less than atrociously bad. Zeke is batting a cool .228 for the Nats and Kuhel is hitting an even .200 for the White Sox. The upshot of the deal has been that both clubs could stand a good first baseman.

But despite Bonura's failure to hit, with or without men on bases, the White Sox appear to have taken the worst licking on the deal. For in addition to Kuhel's helplessness at the plate the Sox have found themselves bereft of Bonura's dash and fire.

• • • •

If Chicago fans didn't appreciate Bonura's unquenchable spirit during the four years he played in Comiskey Park, they're appreciating it now. The White Sox are a listless ball club. Chicago newspapers are saying bluntly that they have quit. Their play is dispirited and they appear hopelessly mired in seventh place.

When Bonura was with the White Sox they could never accuse Dykes' club of being a pepless crew. The big Italian never permitted his spirit to sag even when the club's fortunes were at their lowest. He has been a tonic to the Nats despite his failures at the plate.

• • • •

Today big Zeke was virtually swinging his heart out in an attempt to show the Chicago fans that he could still hit. But after flying to centerfield in the first inning, he failed to get a ball out of the infield. Once, he struck out. The only time he reached base was when he was hit by a pitched ball.

Both Harris and Dykes, however, are philosophical about the Bonura-Kuhel deal. "Zeke is still dangerous up there at the plate," said Harris. "He'll snap out of this slump."

Dykes cheerfully admitted that Kuhel had been a great disappointment this season, "but that's baseball," he declared. "The chances are both Kuhel and Bonura will have great seasons next year."

Today's victory for the Nats must be set down as a distinct triumph for Manager Bucky Harris who deliberately flew into the face of the fates and started Harry Kelley on the mound. Before the game, Harris expressed his confidence in Kelley. "I know it seems stupid of me to start him," said the Nats' manager, "but I have a terrific hunch about him. I don't care what his record has been this season, I've been watching him warm up and he appears to have all of his old stuff.

"At least he knows how to pitch. He's not one of those scatter-arm guys who loads the bases with walks. That's what's been murdering us all season. I never did believe until now that Kelley has been in shape to pitch. He was overworked before the season started and got stale.

"Then he got so much rest he picked up weight. He's had a hard time shedding it, but he looks fit to me now. And I like his spirit. He'll be in there trying. I know that."

Kelley was in there trying all right. He was in there trying to keep from sliding back into the minors where he seryed 12 years before his talents were discovered by Connie Mack. That five-hit shut-out performance he won today was the biggest ball game he ever won in his life.

Reds Shell 'King Carl,' Win, 6 to 2

Giants' Ace Is Knocked Loose From Lead on Homers in Fourth.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 21.—Even King Carl Hubbell couldn't cool off those red-hot Reds from Cincinnati today, and they trounced the Giants, 6 to 2, to climb within a game and a half of the National League leaders.

Given a 1-run edge on Harry Danning's homer in the first inning, King Carl retired the first ten men in order, but then was knocked loose from the lead on homers by Ival Goodman and Ernie Lombardi in the fourth, and finally was clouted for another 3-run rally in the seventh which put the game beyond recall.

It was the Reds' ninth win in their last 11 starts, and marked the third time in a row Hubbell made a vain bid for his 200th major league pitching victory. Previously, the Cardinals and Pirates had each stopped him from reaching that goal.

Big Jim Weaver, who opposed The Hub at the start, gave up only three hits and two runs through the first six frames. With one out in the seventh, however, he lost control. After he had loaded the bases, Bucky Walters was rushed in and put out the fire by forcing Mel Ott to ground into a double play.

Six of the seven hits Hubbell gave up were for extra bases. Goodman followed his sixteenth homer of the year with a triple.

Buck McCormick's triple, singles by Lombardi and Harry Craft, and Billy Meyers' freak two-bagger, which rolled through the middle of the Giant infield, accounted for the final trio of Red runs.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheatie' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

The undisputed hero of the Nats' victory over the White Sox yesterday was the veteran Harry Kelley, and to him goes the bulk of the points in the latest award in the Man of the Month Contest.

To Kelley, five points, because he allowed only five hits while holding the White Sox runless throughout the game, and because he was always in complete command.

To Al Simmons, three points because he gave the Nats a commanding lead by hitting a home run with a man on base in the fifth, and because he virtually clinched the game when his seventh-inning single drove in two more runs.

To Ossie Bluege, one point, because his long two-bagger in the second inning made the Nats' 2-0 lead possible.

To George Case, one point because he contributed two hard-hit doubles to the Nats' attack and saved Kelley's shutout with a spectacular catch in the ninth.

THE SCORE:

Homers Help Browns Win

Sullivan, Heath Sink Macks, 5 to 2.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 21.—Oral Hildebrand gave up only five hits and struck out seven today as the St. Louis Browns won the first of their three-game series with the Philadelphia Athletics, 5 to 2.

Billy Sullivan, subbing for the injured George McQuinn at first base for the Browns, hit for the circuit in the third. In the fourth Tommy Heath blasted one of Ross' offerings into the leftfield bleachers.

Sam Chapman, Athletics' leftfielder, got the circuit blow off Hildebrand in the seventh, for the first Philadelphia score. A triple by Lodigiani and E. Smith's grounder produced the other a few moments later.

Cubs Score Behind Root

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 21.—Charley Root's relief pitching today give the Chicago Cubs a 4 to 3 victory over the Phillies.

Root relieved Rookie Paul Epperly in the sixth after the Phils had scored two runs on Morrie Arnovich's home run, with Phil Weintraub on base. He yielded only two hits in the last four innings. The Phils put the tying run on base in the seventh and eighth, but Root bore down when a hit meant a run.

The Cubs scored twice in the third on Epperly's long drive to center off Claude Passeau. Martin misjudged the ball and it went for a double. In the sixth Herman scoring the winning run when Passeau, after having tagged Herman out at the plate, dropped the ball.

Bees Edge Cards, 3-1

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 21. — The Boston Bees combined one solid hit with three errors today to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals, 3-1, and give Right-hander Jim Turner his seventh triumph of the season.

All of the Boston runs, made in the third, were unearned for, with one out, Stu Martin fumbled Elbie Fletcher's grounder, and Johnny Cooney and Debs Garms beat out bunts to fill the bases against Flipper McGee.

After Max West flied out, Tony Cuccinello drove in two runs with a single to left and Garms countered with a third run when Ducky Medwick let the hit roll to the leftfield stands.

The Bees collected six hits, five of them against McGee, who was yanked for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

Higgins Sets Record For Successive Hits

Detroit, June 21 (AP).—Frank Higgins, Boston Red Sox third baseman, hit his twelfth consecutive safety in the eighth inning of the nightcap of a double-header with Detroit here today, breaking the American League record set by Tris Speaker in 1920.

Starting with a single his last time at bat in the first game of a double-header at Chicago Sunday, Higgins had a double, two singles and a walk in the second game; a double, three singles and a walk in the first game here today, and three singles in the second game.

Fight Splits Pro Golfers

Capital Links Stars 50-50 in Tonight's Bout.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

After a few hours pondering on who'll win the fight tonight, and reading articles by a dozen guys who should know, we were still very much up in the air on would it be Louis or Schmeling. So we decided to query the city's golf pros, who might know a par from a left hook, and after talking to 21 pros and assistants we're still in the dark, it was 10-10 and one no verdict.

The Louis boosters were led by Wiffy Cox, Congressional's pro, who liked the youth, punch and faster-thinking of the champion to retain his crown. Cox spent eight weeks in Schmeling's training camp before the German fought Johnny Risko, playing golf and teaching the challenger. He was a Schmeling man then but thinks that Max has slowed up and doesn't figure to take the title tonight.

Wiffy knows a majority of the fight moguls, champs and former champs, and has seen many of the big time bouts, including Dempsey, Berlenbach and others, and he is firm in his convictions that the champ will still be champ after the battle.

Treder Confuses Issue.

The count was 10 to 10 and we still hadn't talked to Al Treder, Manor pro. Hoping that he would settle the issue, Al just confused us a little more by predicting first, rain; second, a draw, and third, a double knockout.

Cox's assistants at Congressional, Ernie Garlem and Warner Grey, were divided, with the former liking Louis and the latter Max Schmeling, but with Wiffy's vote the Congressional shop went Louis by 2 to 1.

Tony Sylvester at Capital liked Schmeling by a K.O., and Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam, preferred the German but over the full distance. Leo Walper was a firm Schmeling rooter, Harry Graham at Rock Creek sided with Walper and the Burton brothers at Army and Navy, liked the same man, Schmeling, Danny by a decision and Alan by a knockout.

Al Jamison's assistants at Indian Spring, his brother Paul, and Smitty Padgett, finally agreed on something, and it was Schmeling. The other booster of the German was Gil Willett, Kenwood, who disagreed with his boss, George Diffenbaugh, a Louis man.

McLeod Favors Louis.

Freddie McLeod, Columbia's veteran pro, believes Schmeling has a chance if he can put Louis away within the first seven rounds. He evidently didn't think the German had much chance to do that, as he cast a vote for Louis.

The Worsham brothers at Chevy Chase, Lewis, jr., and "Buck" cast a 2-0 vote for the dusky champion while at East Potomac, Mel Shorey, pro, and Tommy Doerer, manager, agreed on Louis, but argued over the manner of his victory, Mel saying by a K. O. and Tommy preferring a decision.

Eddie Stevens, Treder's assistant at Manor, liked Louis, while Brick Wood, at Washington, was so enthusiastic over the champion's chances he was running around trying to lay a wager.

After talking to all the divot-diggers and reaching no verdict, we decided to stick with Treder, if it doesn't rain, if it's not a double K. O. or draw, or if one doesn't knock the other out, then somebody is going to cop that decision.

Biggest Field Since '32 In Maryland State Golf

Baltimore, June 21 (AP).—The largest field since 1932 was predicted today for the Maryland State Golf Association's eighteenth annual tournament to be played at Rodgers Forge Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Entries will close at noon tomorrow, with indications now that more than 86, the number competing in 1932, will seek the crown now held by Volney Burnett, Indian Spring golfer.

Joe Jacobs Refused License to Aid Max

New York Board Declines to Reinstate Suspended Manager; Scalpers Ply Busy Trade; Bomber Is Favorite; Both Men Confident.

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

New York, June 21.—To a city already as jittery as a bridegroom fumbling for the wedding ring, tonight came the preliminaries to the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling battle for world heavyweight supremacy which will be fought tomorrow in the man-made battle pit that is Yankee Stadium.

In conjunction with the fight, but briefly crowding the principals into the background were three important decisions handed down late this afternoon by the New York State Athletic Commission. It decreed:

(a) That Louis will not be permitted to use specially-constructed gloves with longer thumbs than usually found in the standard New York mitten;

(b) That Joe (Yussel) Jacobs, Schmeling's Jewish-American manager, who was suspended several months ago, will not be reinstated and therefore will not be in the German's corner;

(c) That the next heavyweight championship bout will be staged in this city in September with Max Baer, former world champion twice removed, in the role of challenger.

Anxious for "Special."

While the gloves angle was trumped up more or less as ballyhoo, the champion actually was anxious to use his special mitt, a Frager-made product, which has adorned his fists in every one of his professional appearances since he reached the top. Schmeling's protest was based on the fact that the elongated thumb, which protruded approximately a quarter of an inch beyond the knuckles, would make him susceptible to eye-gouging.

But if the commission's refusal to grant Louis his special glove hurt, its refusal to reinstate Jacobs was even more painful to Schmeling. This will mark the first time that Jacobs will not be in the Black Uhlan's corner, and the first time on record where a challenger's manager has not been behind his man during actual combat in a title fight.

Tonight New York is fight crazy. The city is jammed with visiting fight fans, and every inch of available hotel space is taken and every hotel has waiting lists after turning away hundreds of would-be customers. Only through the good offices of George Reilly, manager of the Hotel New Yorker and a former Washingtonian, was your correspondent able to squeeze in.

Million Dollar Gate.

Promoter Mike Jacobs late this afternoon announced that a million dollar gate is assured, with more than $800,000 already in the till.

Business lagged around the Hippodrome box-office today, but a last minute rush for the cheaper seats is expected to bring a complete sell-out.

Ticket scalpers are busy with their pastboards, and asking $125 for ringside seats. Takers were plentiful.

Louis and the challenger for his title completed training activities yesterday and both are due in the city tonight. Louis will be quartered at a friend's home in Harlem while Max will remain in seculusion at an unnamed hotel. Both are as near perfect, physically, as humanly possible.

The title-holder expected to come in between 197 and 198 pounds, and Schmeling should scale around 195—best fighting weights for them, respectively.

Louis Is Favorite.

Louis undoubtedly will enter the ring in the role of favorite, with the bookies quoting him a 9-5 favorite tonight. Schmeling is not lacking financial support, however, and his countrymen are risking sizeable rolls on him. The general attitude seems to be that odds on Louis will rise to at least 2-1 as the first bell nears.

The air is cloudy with fight talk and battle plans. Police were called to Forty-second and Broadway to disperse a crowd of alleged experts (carrying inside stuff in their hip pockets) trying to speak at the same time. Everybody seems to have turned expert for a couple of days, anyway, and insists on getting in at least one opinion.

At noon tomorrow, when the gladiators step on the scales at Madison Square Garden, the city will be firmly divided in its choices.

Whether Maj. Gen. John J. Phelan (retired) chairman of the athletic commission, has any new gags to spring, such as he did at the Ross-Armstrong ceremonies, remains to be seen. The press confidently expects him to have something extraordinary for his audience.

Both Are Confident.

Both Schmeling and Louis have expressed confidence in their ability to win, or at least their managers have expressed it for them. Schmeling is credited with predicting a knockout victory within 10 rounds, while Louis is on record with a statement that he'll win by the same method in two—or less. At any rate it figures to be a great fight, unless the boys are too cautious.

A flock of national celebrities are expected to witness the festivities, including Elliott Roosevelt, Postmaster General Jim Farley, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan and sundry other Congressmen and Governors. Sportsmen will be a dime a dozen. Pete Herman, the blind bantam and former champion, is here from New Orleans, and will occupy a ringside chair.

From Speculator, N. Y., site of Schmeling's training camp, came word today that Capt. William M. Meyers, former police captain in Kansas City who has picked every winner in the last 17 heavyweight fights, has named the German as his choice. To Max it was a good omen, and merely served to confirm his own opinion of the outcome.

Is Schmeling Stale?

One of the questions propounded by the writers has to do with Schmeling's willingness to overwork himself. Some are asking if he has left his fight in the gym and burned himself out by too much work. One who subscribes to that opinion is Artie McGovern, well-known trainer.

Louis, on the other hand, was brought along slowly and extremely cautiously, and should be at his peak when the bell rings. But no one knows Schmeling better than Schmeling, and he says he never has been as ready for a fight as he is for this one.

Kelley Holds White Sox to 5 Hits as Nats Win, 7-0

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Final Analysis.

New York, June 21. — There are, in round numbers, at least a couple of million people in these United States who are wondering today how the fight between Max Schmeling and Joe Louis is going to come out. The rest of the people know how it's going to come out, only they don't all agree.

VIDMER.

Some are sure the German will repeat his knockout victory of two years ago, the others are just as positive that Louis will win this time, beat the only man who ever beat him and retain his title of heavyweight champion of the world.

Personally, I don't know a thing, but I have a great many very definite opinions concerning the million dollar melodrama that will take place beneath the yellow lights of the Yankee Stadium Wednesday evening. And so what follows, by way of a comparison of the two men involved in the struggle for the most glamorous title in the sphere of sports, is simply a collection of my own sincere ideas, and whether the conclusion that they draw is right or wrong—well, it won't be long before we know.

* * * *

Condition—It's all very well to observe the fighters as they go through their training paces and murmur, 'He certainly loks fit," but I can't seem to recall a fighter preparing for battle that didn't look fit to the naked eye of the observers who sat around the training ring.

Jack Dempsey looked wonderful at Atlantic City as he prepared for his first fight with Gene Tunney. But he looked like a purple pulp after the bout was over. Primo Carnera looked like a demon of destruction as he trained for his battle with Max Baer, but he looked like a butchered dragon at the finish of the fight.

Bill Brown did think that Baer didn't look in shape before that contest and, in fact, went so far as to say Baer was a bum and the contest shouldn't be allowed. But even the eyes of the boxing commissioner and health expert were deceived, if one can judge by results.

So we can throw out any comparison of condition. Of course both men are in condition. They've been training for weeks and there hasn't been even a rumor of broken hands, cut eyes, whooping cough or even prickly heat in either camp. Round even.

* * * *

Strange Odds.

Past performances—those who seem so sure that Schmeling will win offer as their ace argument, and I must admit there is some logic in their reasoning, that Schmeling beat Louis before. In fact, he knocked Louis out. On that basis Schmeling, naturally, should be a favorite. He beat Louis a couple of years ago, why shouldn't he do it again? But oddly enough, in spite of that undeniable fact, Louis is a 2-to-1 favorite in the betting. It seems that there must be quite a few folks who feel there was some mistake about the result of that other encounter.

And, of course, I am one of them. I would rather go a little deeper into the record of past performances before drawing any conclusions. For instance, the Schmeling constituents point out with an air of authority that Louis never beat anybody worth mentioning in the same breath with Schmeling. And to that, I must ask, whom did Schmeling ever beat that Louis didn't? Of course, Louis couldn't be expected to beat himself, although it's possible that he even did that when he got up too soon in the last fight with the German.

On the other hand, who ever beat Louis? That is, outside of Schmeling? Certainly he wasn't beaten by any Hamases or Sharkeys or Baers. If those fellows are bums, supposing for the moment that Louis never has fought anything but bums, then what does that make Schmeling, who was defeated by all three of them? Somehow I just can't seem to digest the Schmeling supporters' reasoning along these lines. Louis' round.

* * * *

Quick to Forget.

Mental attitude—A great many fight fans and casual followers seem to place a great deal of emphasis on the mental attitude of the two men. They contend and with a great show of confidence, that Louis will remember, above all things, the terrific beating he took from Schmeling two years ago and that he will be timid when he faces the German again. And they point to Schmeling's supreme confidence as further assurance of the ultimate outcome.

Having observed as far as possible the mental attitudes of the two men, and I must admit that I think it is important, I'm quite willing to admit Schmeling's confidence in his own ability to repeat his victory. He has no fear of the Brown Bomber's loudly lauded power. He seems to feel mentally superior, sufficiently powerful to drop the champion with a punch and quite capable of protecting himself at times. There is no lack confidence in Schmeling's make-up.

But if I were a psychoanalyst and had to make a report on what effect the beating he took from Schmeling two years ago had on Louis at the present time, I'm afraid I would have to write under the head of mental attitude, the simple word "none." Round even.

Not How Long—How Many-

Age and experience—it is well enough to scoff at the idea that Schmeling is an old man when he isn't yet quite 33, but that is an advanced age in the ring, when fellows like Tony Canzoneri and Barney Ross are retiring at 28 and 29 because they feel they've passed their prime, when Jim Braddock hangs up his gloves at 32 because he feels he can't go any farther,

Al Simmons Accounts for 4 Griff Runs

Case and Bluege Join in 10-Hit Assault on 3 Chicago Hurlers.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent

Chicago, June 21.—A five-hit shutout job by Harry Kelley, of all people, today enabled the Nats to win the series opener from Chicago's floundering White Sox.

Released by the Athletics six weeks ago, and since that time maneuvering on thin ice with the Nats, the portly, baldish Kelley pitched himself back into the favor of Manager Bucky Harris with a masterful performance.

The score was 7 to 0 and it was a smashing success for Manager Harris' noble experiment. Desperate for pitchers, Harris today was giving Kelley his last chance. Failure meant that the minors were beckoning to the 31-year-old right-hander.

Simmons His Ally.

He hadn't been able to win a game all season. In his every start he had been batted from the box. As a relief pitcher with the Nats he had been a pathetic failure and Washington fans learned to regard his every appearance with doubt and suspicion.

But today Kelley was something to see. Never was he in serious danger of losing his shutout. Only two White Sox reached third base. And only once did they have as many as two runners on base in the same inning. It was only the second time this season that the Chicago club had been shut out.

Before this, though, we should have mentioned, perhaps, that Kelley had a valuable ally today in his supporting cast. He was Al Simmons, who came back to Comiskey Park, where he had formerly been employed, and had a large afternoon.

Simmons personally was responsible for four of the Nats' seven runs. In the fifth inning he bashed out his seventh homer of the season, a long soaring drive into the upper deck in leftfield, with Buddy Lewis on base. And in the seventh, with runners on second and third, he whacked a sharp single into rightfield to drive another home. Simmons added a single in the ninth, to account for three of the Nats' ten hits.

Left-handed Thornton Lee was the first victim of the Nats. The Chicago southpaw, who used to rate as something of a Nemesis to the Washington club, was knocked loose from two runs in the second inning after he hit Cecil Travis in the back with a pitched ball.

Ossie Bluege, who is even older than Kelley or Simmons, blasted a terrific two-bagger into right centerfield that sent Travis to third, and then Rick Ferrell single to center to score Travis. Then, while Kelley was hitting into a double play, Bluege scored from third. With two out in the fifth, Buddy Lewis whacked a tripple against the left-center scoreboard, and then it was that Mr. Simmons walloped his homer, to put the Nats in a 4-to-0 lead.

Only One Walked.

That was the last they saw of the left-handed Lee. Johnny Rigney ran into a two-run storm in the seventh after he walked Case. Sam West singled, Buddy Lewis sacrificed and Simmons thumped a single to right that boosted the figures to 6-0.

The White Sox had a horrible time of it against Kelley. In the first four innings the only hit they had to show for their efforts was Steinbacher's single in the first. The veteran right-hander, dealing almost strictly in tantalizing curves, walked only one batter.

Two of the five hits he allowed were cheap infield affairs. Kelley was the big reason why the game was played in one hour and 30 minutes.

The only time his shutout was even mildly threatened was in the ninth after Kreevich singled with one out. Then, with two out, young George Case saved the shutout for the old boy by backing up against the rightfield wall to drag down Kuhel's line drive.

Abrams to Refuse New Weight Limit

Syd Fishel, manager of George Abrams, D. C. fighter, told Goldie Ahearn, matchmaker for the Turner-Ahearn interests, and Chris Dundee, manager of Phil Furr, Abrams' opponent next Monday night at Griffith Stadium, that Abrams would not make weight.

Fishel said that he would also oppose another weighing-in. Abrams came in at 158 last Monday and Furr at 148. The fight was postponed because of rain.

West Scores Another Run for the Nationals

Yale Blanks Harvard, 5-0

Jubitz Pitches and Bats Eli to Victory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Haven, Conn., June 21.—Yale's Moe Jubitz achieved a year-old ambition today. Knocked out of the box in his first start against Harvard just 12 months ago, the Blue southpaw held the invading Cantabs to four hits this afternoon, shut them out, 5 to 0, and blasted whatever hopes they had of tying Dartmouth for the 1938 Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League title. An alumni-day crowd of 6,500 attended.

Jubitz pitched a good ball game. He was in trouble only twice, in the sixth and the eighth. Each time the Cantabs had the bases filled, but each time Jubitz successfully manipulated his way out, in the second instance by striking out two batters and forcing the third to ground out. He never was in trouble before or after those two lapses.

He struck out nine men. During the first five innings he faced only 17 batters and only two reached first and one got as far as second.

Yale, meanwhile, got to Harvard's Ed Ingalls, undefeated in five games prior to today, as early as the second inning, scoring two runs on two hits and two bases on balls. The Blue scored another in the fourth and one more in each of the seventh and eighth. Altogether it found the Harvard ace for eight safe blows, all singles, but eight bases on balls and three errors helped.

In addition to holding the Crimson in check, Jubitz also did a fine job offensively, getting two hits in two times at bat, drawing two bases on balls and batting in the first Yale run in the second. The stage for this, the winning tally, was set by two consecutive walks—to Harry Holt and Ronald Cooke. Holt went to third on Bill Loveday's outfield fly and then scored on Jubitz's single to center. A moment later Cooke scored on Paul Wargo's single to left and there was the ball game.

Shawnee-On-Delaware, Pa., June 21 (AP).—Gene Sarazen today announced he had decided to pass up the British Open Golf championship for another try at the national professional title here, July 10-16. Feller Beats Yanks, 10-5

Bob Scores 8th Victory; Tribe Chases Ruffing.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 21.—Though Bob Feller was wild and gave nine bases on balls, the league-leading Indians backed up their young right-hander with a 14-hit attack today to swamp the Yankees, 10 to 5.

The Indians got all their hits off Charley Ruffing, who finally was driven to the showers in the seventh. Cleveland got six runs in that inning on singles by Hale and Keltner, two bases on balls, and doubles by Lary, Averill and Hemsley, the latter with the bases loaded.

With six runs in, a man on second and only one out, Ruffing was yanked in favor of Ivy Paul Andrews, who retired the next two men and finished out the game without further damage.

Cleveland got the jump on the world champions by scoring twice in the first on singles by Lary, Campbell, Heath and Averill. The Yanks went one up in the third, when Feller walked the first three men and three runs came in on a force play, a single by DiMaggio and Gehrig's infield out.

Heath's home run, scoring Hale ahead of him, regained the lead for the Indians in the last of the sixth, but the Yanks went ahead again at 5-4 on singles by DiMaggio, Gehrig, Henrich and Selkirk. That was the last time the New Yorkers were in front.

Hemsley led the Cleveland attack with his double and two singles, while Heath batted home four runs with his four-bagger and single. DiMaggio was the only Yankee to get two hits as Feller limited the champions to seven. It was his eight victory against only two defeats.

Army-Navy Team Loses Golf Crown

Congressional Wins D.C. Title in Playoff by 8 to 1 Score.

Congressional women golfers won the second team championship of the Women's District Golf Association, routing Army and Navy in the playoff encounter at Indian Spring yesterday by a convincing 8-to-1 margin. The teams tied at the end of the regulation play last week with 45 points each.

The winners swept all three points in the first two foursomes, Mrs. Myron Davy and Mrs. J. F. Dowdall defeating Mrs. W. Bush and Mrs. R. L. Rose, team captain, scoring a 3-to-0 win over Mrs. Felix Gygax and Mrs. F. Whittaker, captain of the losers, in the second match.

Mrs. J. H. Carter and Mrs. George Lynch scored the only point for the Service Club team in the third match against Mrs. H. A. Knox and Mrs. F. G. Awalt, the latter team winning one nine and the 18-hole match for a 2-to-1 decision.

The triumph gave the Congressional Club the second and third team trophies, matching Chevy Chase's performance of last year in winning two of the three titles. Indian Spring's first team won the title in that class in a series of dual matches with Chevy Chase.

The decisive triumph was revenge for the Congressional Club, which bowed to Army and Navy over the latter's course earlier in the season. It was the worst defeat suffered by the losers in the seven weeks of play.

Royal Veil Wins Washington Post Purse, Feature at Charles Town

Witt Gelding Pays $15.20 To Backers

Jockey Berg Rides the Winner; Trainer Gets Floral Blanket.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, Va., June 21.—With a big, black "W" on the back of his green blouse, Jockey Mannie Berg brought Royal Veil, an 8-year-old gelding, through the stretch to win The Washington Post Purse, feature race of today's program. Those who either figured Royal Veil to have a chance or played the "W" hunch, collected a bunch in the form of a $15.20 mutuel. Two lengths behind the winner came Adriatic to gain a head decision over Lula Khayyam for second money. Four others competed in the 4½-furlong sprint.

Royal Veil, a son of Herodote, stepped the route in the creditable time of 0:50 2-5 over a track that was lightning fast and under skies that frowned but failed to cry.

Royal Veil broke in the center of the pack but Jockey Berg rushed him through to get to the front. Adriatic and Lula Khayyam tried to match strides with the veteran leader but he just tilted his head forward and kept digging. Berg gave him little chance to lag and held the purse safe by drawing out gradually in the run to the wire.

The Alexander F. Jones Purse, opening the program, went to Scout-allow, owned by Mrs. H. Horst and capably handled by Jockey Sammy Palumbo. The $6.80 shot forged to the front of Roving Eye in mid-stretch and drew out. Broken Rhythm was third in the field of eight.

Pork Chops, track mascot, watched the running of the second race, named for him, from the press box, and saw Palumbo make it two straight winners. Keswick Hill, sold last week for $100, won his second race for his new owner. The 3-year-old gelding led Red Nose and For-get Not to the imaginary wire to pay $13.60.

when a dozen great fighters I might mention have tried to fight after 30 and found that they were distinctly on the downgrade, then some notice must be paid to Schmeling's years.

Of course, in those years he has rolled up a vast amount of experience and acquired considerable ring knowledge. But experience comes from activity not merely from the passing of time, and in the last five years Louis has fought 39 battles. In the same period Schmeling has fought only 22 fights since he first came over here, unheralded and unhailed, in 1928—ten years ago.

On experience, I'm afraid I can't give the German even an edge. On intelligence and brains, of course, he has a tremendous advantage, but the thought persists that no one yet has been able to outsmart a keg of dynamite, Louis's round.

Anita Lizana Beaten in First Round of Wimbledon Tennis

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, June 21.—United States Champion Anita Lizana, of Chile, weeping inconsolably, made her entrance and exit in the All-England tennis championships at Wimbledon today.

Unofficial world's No. 1 woman player last year, yet not even seeded by Wimbledon officials, the senorita lost the second straight year to French Champion Mme. Rene Mathieu, 6—4, 6—4.

When the match was over Senorita Lizana shook hands with the veteran Frenchwoman, curtsied gracefully to the Duchess of Kent, who was seated in the royal box, then fled home weeping through the crowd.

The crowd of 12,000 obviously was with Senorita Lizana, but she insisted on getting into a hole and then trying to pull off a miracle in every game. She had to rely mainly on her easy second service, which Mme. Mathieu battered back for winners. She also tried to drop-shot Mme. Mathieu to death. The idea of drop-shotting the Frenchwoman was good, but most of the time the ball hit on the wrong side of the net.

Three other incidents were worth mention—Don Budge still was well off his game as he and Gene Mako beat L. De Borman and Pierre Geehland, of Belgium in doubles, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4; Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland, lost a set to steady Dorothy Stevenson, of Australia, whom she beat by 6—1, 3—6, 6—3, and Helen Jacobs appeared recovered from her arm injury in drubbing Mary Whitemarsh, of England, 6—0, 6—1.

Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., a member of the U. S. Wightman Cup squad, also played in top form to defeat Miss C. M. Burrows, a really good English player, 6—3, 6—0.

Alice Marble, American champion in 1936, had fun beating Mary Cootes, of Alexandria, Va., 6—0, 6—2. The tall, pretty Southern girl proudly announced after the match:

"Think of me taking two games from Alice!"

Dorothy May Bundy, husky Wightman cupper from Santa Monica, Calif., who holds the Australia title, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, her team mate, also came through the first round without undue difficulty. Miss Bundy eliminated Phyllis Morrison, of Britain, 6—2, 6—2, and Mrs. Fabyan whipped Miss G. Enger, of Germany, 6—1, 6—3.

Dave Johnsen In Net Final

Will Meet Parsons for Mid-Atlantic Title.

By the Associated Press.

Charleston, W. Va., June 21.—Huntington's Deacon Parsons, pre-tournament favorite, almost met his match in the semifinals of the Mid-Atlantic junior tennis tournament today, but came through to win, 1—7, 6—4, 6—3, over J. K. Mallory, jr., of Norfolk, Va.

Mallory's vicious forehand smashes and cross-court placements had Parsons running in the first set, and the young Virginian ran up a 4—2 lead in the second before Parsons found his stride.

He will meet David Johnsen, of Washington, D. C., tomorrow in the finals.

Johnsen had things his own way in disposing of Dick Spindle, of Norfolk, 6—1, 6—3, and his play in the semifinals bracket presaged plenty of trouble for Parsons tomorrow.

In the boys' division, Chandler Brossard, of Washington, and Robert Bensinger, of Washington, advanced to the finals with little or no trouble.

Brossard took Leabron Steele, of Bluefield, 6—2, 6—2, while Bensinger defeated Alfred Parker, of Norfolk, 6—3, 6—0.

Earlier in the day, Parsons trounced Bill Eley, of Norfolk, while Johnsen was taking the measure of Bill Dunham, of Parkersburg.

Craft Start Ocean Race

By the Associated Press.

Newport, R. I., June 21.—Their canvas filled by a brisk southwesterly, a fleet of 43 small but seaworthy sailing craft was outward bound tonight for St. David's Head, Bermuda, 635 miles out across the Gulf Stream, in the Cruising Club of America's biennial ocean race.

The largest entry was Cummins Catherwood's 73½-foot ketch, Valkyrie, almost twice the length of the smallest entries.

The U. S. S. Vimarie, a 72-foot ketch entered by the United States Naval Academy, is the scratch boat and she must allow Robert Leeson's 40-foot cutter Narwhal the top time allowance of 20 hours, 40 minutes and 35 seconds.

Clear weather and a 20-mile breeze favored the start, off Brenton's Reef lightship, scene of several America's Cup contests. The fleet got away in two divisions, at 2 p. m. (Eastern standard time) and 10 minutes later. Yachting enthusiasts expected St. David's Head would be raised in about five days.

Included in the fleet were three foreign entries, England's Latifa, a 70-foot cutter; Germany's Roland von Bremen, a 49-foot yawl, and Canada's Eskasoni, a schooner.

Case Suffers Cut on Thigh

Rookie Not Badly Hurt; Will Play Today.

Chicago, June 21.—Rookie George Washington Case, prize performer of the Washington club on its current road trip, tonight was nursing a painful wound on his right thigh as a result of crashing into the right-field wall at Comiskey Park today.

Case dashed back to the brick wall to make a spectacular catch of Joe Kuhel's line drive for the final out of the game, which guaranteed Harry Kelley's shutout victory, and then he slumped to the ground.

He had hit the wall with a terrific crash and panic reigned among the Nats who rushed to his aid. Trainer Mike Martin applied first aid and Case was limping badly as he left the field.

In the dressing room he revealed a deep gash in his thigh. Trainer Martin declared that barring overnight stiffening, Case would be able to play tomorrow.

Manager Bucky Harris was extremely solicitous of the rookie's welfare. "I'm glad it's nothing worse," he said, "it would be an awful blow to lose Case at this time, especially after the way he has been playing."

Case has batted safely in his last 13 games and hit two doubles in four trips to the plate today. He has been batting .470 since he gained a place as a regular Washington outfielder.

Utahan Wins Medal Round

By the Associated Press.

Lincoln Nebr., June 21.—Par was a pal to the sharpshooters as stocky, bespectacled Edwin Kingsley, of Salt Lake City, won medal honors in the qualifying round of the Trans-Mississippi golf tournament with a sizzling 68, four under perfect figures.

No less than a dozen of the more than 140 entrants bidding for the crown held by Don Schumacher, of Dallas, Tex., equaled or bettered par over a course softened by an early morning rain then blistered by a blazing sun. Schumacher was not required to qualify.

One stroke behind the Utah youth were Walter Blevins, of Kansas City, Missouri State champion, and Herb Deurmeyer, of Lincoln. In the 70 bracket were Bill Holt, of Syracuse, N. Y., and suave O'Hara Watts, of Dallas. Alone at 71 was Rufus King, of Dallas, and deadlocked at par 72 were Ted Adams, of Kansas City; Verne Stewart, of Oklahoma City; Grable Duvall, jr., of Kansas City; Bob Fraser, of Omaha; John Kraft, of Denver, the Colorado State champion; J. V. Scott, of Omaha, and Glenn Oatman, of Lawrence, Kans.

Potomac Will Race Old Dominion Club

Potomac Boat Club and Old Dominion, whose previous regatta was marred by accident and one race canceled by a storm, will meet again next Sunday, opposite the Potomac Club in Georgetown.

Races will be held for 8-oared shells, 4-oared gigs and quadruple sculls. Other features of the event will be announced later.

The previous meeting of these old rivals was held on June 12, off Alexandria. The first and only race held was the 4-oared gig which Potomac won when wash from a speedboat capsized Old Dominion's entry. The 8-oared and other races scheduled were then called off as a sudden wind and rainstorm swept the river.

Sandlot Pick-ups

Don't be surprised if Spencer (Spider) Chase, former University of Maryland athlete who recently walked the aisle with pretty Miss Gertrude Donnella—last Saturday afternoon at 2:30 to be exact—hooks up with one of the Washington or Prince Georges County sandlot aggregations . . . Chase, who starred for the Terps in basketball and baseball from 1931-1934, is now banging a typewriter for the Prince George's Post . . . He covers the sports front.

* * * *

Guess who is thrilling the ladies who follow the sandlot sports program? . . . You remember the nice looking baby-faced basketball center of George Washington University . . . That's right . . . Jack Butterworth is doing the flinging for the First Grill Colonials softball squad . . . And if all reports are true, the elongated floor ace is doing very well, thank you.

* * * *

Joe Porter, the popular twirler of the Washington Gas Light Co. nine, is walking around with a big, broad grin that opens his mouth from ear to ear . . . A recent addition to his family—a petite miss—is the cause of his jubilance . . . Now it is clear why the talkative Joe has been taking a terrible riding from his own chums as well as the opposing bench.

* * * *

In a recent game between Pepco and Thompson's Dairy, Frank Tonker, the "old man of the sandlots," who works for the Pepco Ball Co., belted out three home runs . . . A good day's job for any fellow . . . And if anybody tells you that he is slowing up, don't believe them . . . He is still mighty fast on the bases . . . Smitty Nau, of Georgetown, who made quite a name for himself athletically while attending the Hoya institution, and Shorty Chumbris, who displayed plenty of baseball talent at Maryland University, are back again with the Pepco team.

Heavy Receipts Of New Wheat Depress Price

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 21.—Forced down by selling pressure attributed in part to increase of arrivals from the new winter crop, Chicago wheat values tumbled 2 cents late today. The net result was to transform about 1-cent gain into an equal loss.

Reports indicated that domestic harvest operations would proceed more rapidly from now on, and that the United States' visible supply having probably reached the low point for the season would show an increase on Monday next. Just at this time last year, the 1937 low was recorded, and then an increase of more than 121,000,000 bushels from the low to the peak inside of 90 days.

Dry weather complaints from spring crop areas both sides of the Canadian line, together with fresh jumps of securities, were largely responsible for transient price bulges here. One Canadian report called attention to 7,000,000 acres needing rain.

At the close, Chicago Wheat futures were ⅝ to 1⅛ lower, compared with yesterday's finish, July, 77 to 77⅛; September, 78 to 78⅛; corn, ⅛ to ½ down; July, 57¼ to 57⅝; September, 58⅜ to 58½; oats unchanged to ⅛ off; rye unchanged to ¼ decline, and provisions varying from 32 cents setback to 15 cents advance.

May Life Sales Turn Upward

Hartford, Conn., June 21.—Although ordinary life insurance sales for May, according to the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, were only 76 per cent of those in May, 1937, this ratio represents the first improvement in comparative monthly experience in 1938. The previous 1938-1937 monthly comparisons have been: January, 88 per cent; February, 83 per cent; March, 76 per cent; April, 73 per cent.

Because of this slight upward tendency, the first five months' sales are at the same level as were the sales of the first four months—79 per cent of a year ago. These data are based on the experience of 54 reporting companies increased to represent total sales of ordinary insurance (exclusive of group) of all companies operating in the United States.

As in the previous months, sales of few States have shown gains over 1937. In May there were three: Nevada, North Dakota and South Dakota. These same three plus Kentucky also are showing gains for the first five months. The volume and ratios by sections are given below:

Lower Wages Called Key to Job Problem

Would Permit Lower Prices to Stimulate Demand for Larger Output.

New York, June 21.—The only solution to the unemployment problem, under current conditions, is a downward readjustment of wage scales to a level which will permit the lower prices now needed to stimulate a demand for a larger output of goods, the Alexander Hamilton Institute says today.

Both labor and the Government, however, are opposed to lower wage scales. They apparently believe that lower wage scales mean a lower money income and that a lower money income means a decrease in purchasing power and consequently a further recession of business. It is evident that this line of reasoning is the result of confusing wage scales with money income and of confusing money income with purchasing power.

Wages scales alone do not determine money income. Money income is also determined by the length of time worked. Since, under present conditions, lower wage scales would stimulate production by permitting lower prices to be quoted, lower wage scales would provide longer hours of work. Longer hours would tend to offset the lower wage scales and the worker's money income would be well maintained. The increase in production would be sufficient not only to sustain money income but to absorb many of the unemployed.

Money income alone does not determine purchasing power. Purchasing power is also determined by the prices which consumers pay. Since lower wage scales would result in lower prices without reducing the worker's money income, lower wage scales would result in an increase of the worker's purchasing power. Thus, production would be further stimulated and it would expand to the volume needed to end the unemployment problem.

Since labor and the Government do not follow this line of reasoning, it is apparent that the needed downward readjustment of wage scales will be retarded, thus prolonging the unemployment problem. This readjustment will be delayed the longer because the Government has so much money at its command and is planning to disburse it liberally among the unemployed.

Scrap Copper Rises ¼ Cent Per Pound

New York, June 21 (AP).—The refinery buying price of scrap copper advanced today ¼ cent a pound for all categories, making No. 1, heavy wire scrap 7⅜ cents a pound, equivalent to 8⅞ cents a pound on a refined basis.

The rise followed strengthening in the export market yesterday, continuing in modified degree today. Private cables indicated two reasons for reported heavy export demand—last week's drastic reduction of production quotas by the international cartel and London's reaction to overnight strength in Wall Street.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler, A Special Correspondent.

Official Denial of Dollar Devaluation Hits Gold Stocks But Lifts Market.

New York, June 21.—Spiking of the rumors of a further devaluation in the dollar, for the time officially at least, caused heavy selling of the gold stocks today but it brought strength to the dollar and contributed to a furtherance of the rally in the general market. Government bonds also were strong.

Even more cheering to the financial community than the average rise of a point on the big board was the fact that trading increased to 1,457,030 shares, which made it the largest day's valume since March 30. It also carried the volume for the year to date above the 100,000,000 share mark whereas last year this point was passed as early as February 23. In fact, at this time a year ago the big board brokers had handled 225,000,000 shares.

More individual issues were dealt in today than for any day since March 31. The total of 826 included only 84 that showed minus signs and there were 24 stocks that made new highs for the year. Gains among the active speculative leaders ran from 1 to 3 points with a number adding even more points, for instance Allied Cremical, which soared 9.

Warnings.

Strength and activity of the last two days has done much to make the speculative fraternity forget the headaches of the last three months. At the same time the more cautious in the street point out that there has been no fundamental change in the conditions of business in the last few days and that the move is going a little rapidly.

While it may be that we have seen the lows for the recent bear market it is even more probable that the current upswing has been too sharp and that profit-taking sales must be expected in volume tomorrow.

The foreign exchange market was a center of interest today on account of Mr. Morgenthau's insistence that no further devaluation of the dollar is contemplated by the Administration and also his chiding of speculators. The best single index of the abatement of currency fears was the decline of about 7 cents an ounce in the dollar equivalent of the London gold price.

As a corollary to the slackening in the demand for gold from hoarders, sterling was under considerable pressure, especially from French and Swiss sources. Against the dollar, sterling dropped 1 15-16 cents, following a 7-16 cent decline on Monday. European purchases of American stocks probably accentuated the weakness. Imports of gold from Europe cannot yet be arranged on a profitable basis, but $4,930,000 of gold was engaged in Japan for shipment to the United States.

All Groups Advance.

All groups of stocks participated in the day's advance and a number of the lower priced issues were brought forward to join the customary leaders. Most active was Anaconda, which closed up a point, and next came United States Rubber, up ¾. Steel and Bethlehem and Republic added about a point each.

Chrysler and General Motors were up 1⅜ and 1⅝ respectively while Kennecott was a feature of the metals with a jump of 1½. International Telephone and North American led the utilities with small fractional advances. Johns Manville closed up 3¾ and other leaders to add from 1 to 3 points included American Smelting, Atchison, Coast Line, Du Pont, Great Northern preferred, Harvester, Standard of New Jersey and Union Pacific. Wheat eased slightly in late trading after earlier gains but cotton held to its upward course, adding 8 to 10 points.

Railroad bonds continued to forge ahead in a fairly active listed market, today. The gains that started so impressively on Monday were extended in all carrier issues, save a few high grade money market obligations. But even the 1 to 3 points gained today left the price structure low, for the changes this year are better measured by the 38 point drop in Illinois Central 3½s of 1951, recorded in the first 1938 transaction.

The listed bond market was generally firm, United States Government and other high grade issues held their ground while speculative bonds moved upward with equities. Foreign dollar securities likewise reflected a little buying. In the carrier group, intermediate and low priced bonds showed largest advances, but some of the default bonds also were good.

United States Government bonds were held at former figures, partly because larger banks were more interested in the new offering of $41,500,000 Federal Home Loan Bank debentures, which were well received. The guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations were supported. In counter trading a good demand persisted for Treasury notes and discount bills.

New York, June 21 (AP).—A banking group headed by Brown Harriman & Co. shortly after the close of the New York Stock Exchange today bought from an individual holder a block of 10,000 shares of International Business Machines Corporation common stock, and within a few minutes resold the stock at $145 a share in the over-the-counter market. What the banking group paid for the shares remained a secret. I. B. M. shares closed on the exchange today at $147.50 a share, with closing $146.50 bid, $148 asked.

Life Insurance Salesman Gains In Prestige

By Thomas M. Cahill.

The growing prestige of the life insurance representative was emphasized last night by Kenilworth H. Mathus, insurance advertising executive, addressing the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at a meeting in the main ballroom of the Willard Hotel.

"Time was," Mr. Mathus reminded, "when the public's idea of a life insurance agent was that of a man who had gone into life insurance work after trying everything else. In some isolated cases there might even have been some slight truth in that statement, but the situation now is vastly different

"The vast institution of life insurance today and the high esteem in which it is held by the public, particularly following its remarkable record throughout the depression, could hardly have been made possible without the development of a type of sales representative who enjoys the esteem of the community.

The speaker cited among the reasons for this gradual improvement in the type of sales representatives of American life insurance companies, a more careful selection of agents, development of company training courses and subsequent guidance and supervision in the agency itself; organization of a course of study, similar to a college curriculum, leading to the coveted designation of certified life underwriter; extension of life insurance service to many of the more important and major problems of life—such as estate creation, provision for estate and inheritance taxes, retirement of stock, partnership insurance and various kinds of group, retirement and pension plans.

Author of Three Books.

He informed his audience of prestige building activities performed by life underwriters as he has observed them in the course of 180,000 miles of travel throughout the United States and Canada. Mr. Mathus, advertising manager of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., of this city, and formerly a consultant on the staff of the life insurance sales research bureau, of Hartford, Conn., is a well-known editor. He is the author of three business books, while his articles have appeared frequently in Readers' Digest and more than 20 other publications.

Following his address there was a brief talk by Harold J. Cummings, vice president of Minnesota Mutual Life Insurance Co., who expressed the appreciation of the life insurance companies for constructive efforts of local underwriters associations. The gavel of authority of the association was turned over by President Paul H. Primm to the newly elected president, Richard W. Griswold. Mr. Primm reviewed the year's activities and upon assuming office Mr. Griswold announced election by the directors of the following officers for the ensuing year: Charles W. O'Donnell, first vice president; Graham E. Wilson, second vice president; Theodore W. Cook, treasurer, and Albert H. Jackman, secretary. At the close of the meeting a buffet supper was served to members and guests.

Bank Auditors.

The auditors' section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association holds its annual meeting at the Wardman Park Hotel, tomorrow evening, at 7 o'clock. This session, the final one for the section year 1937-38, is open to the wives and friends of representatives of the group. After the meeting there will be dancing in the Metronome Room and a large attendance is expected.

The chairman of the section, Harry L. Downey, will read his report of the activities for the administrative year which he previously gave at the District Bankers Association convention at Hot Springs, Va., the early part of this month. Other business will be the election of the executive council and election and installation of officers for the coming year.

The nominating committee has selected the following as nominees for the executive council, the five receiving the largest number of votes being elected: A. J. Bitterly, Munsey Trust Co.; Harold W. Denison, Bank of Commerce & Savings; Vernon Dorman, American Security & Trust Co.; Harry L. Downey, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; H. Norman Glasco, Union Trust Co.; Gerald E. Keene, Second National Bank; William B. Mehler, jr., The City Bank; Audley A. P. Thomas, Liberty National Bank; D. D. Whitcraft, Riggs National Bank.

According to precedent, Millard S. Yeatman, past chairman, will leave the committee; Mr. Downey, retiring chairman, will take a place on the committee; Gerald E. Keene, H. Norman Glasco and William B. Mehler, jr., will be advanced to the office of chairman, vice chairman and secretary, respectively.

A. B. C. Meeting.

Cotton Prices Continue Rise

New York, June 21 (AP).—Cotton continued its advance today on unfavorable weather in the South, activity in the cotton goods market and strength of stocks. October sold up from 8.38 to 8.65 and closed at 8.63, with final prices 8 to 10 points net higher.

The market opened 6 to 9 points higher in response to firm Liverpool and Bombay cables and on buying from that market. Offers were not aggressive and prices responded to a moderate demand. Mill buying was more active as Worth street reported buyers of cotton goods were paying ⅛ cent per yard advances following large sales yesterday. Other buying was based on expectations tomorrow's weekly weather report would reflect unfavorable crop progress.

Commodities Called Hedge With Inflation

Dr. Lewis Haney Predicts Further Devaluation After Elections.

New York, June 21.—Commodities are the best hedge against the positive effects of inflation which will probably soon be felt in this country, in the opinion of Dr. Lewis Haney, professor of economics at New York University, speaking today at a luncheon forum given by the Community Corporation of which he is economic adviser. The meeting was attended by about 130 investment dealers from all over the United States.

Forecasting further devaluation of the dollar probably after the November elections, Dr. Haney said commodity prices will go up as the value of the dollar goes down. Commodities, also, unlike the securities of corporations purchased as inflation hedges, involve no increase in operating expenses in line with larger sales volume, and are free of labor troubles and the restraining effects of price fixing.

County Leaders In South Back Court Bill Foes

'Grass Roots' in Maryland, Georgia, South Carolina Defy 'Purge.'

Democratic county chairmen in Georgia, South Carolina and Maryland, according to their answers to a poll yesterday, favor the renomination of the three sitting conservative, anticourt bill Democrats who are at the top of the left-wing New Deal "purge list."

Criticism of "rubber stamp" candidates, Washington "interference" and even of New Deal policies was voiced by some of these "grass roots" party leaders. "We are Jeffersonian Democrats but not Roosevelt Democrats" and "one hundred percenters are taboo" were some of the signed expressions from South Carolina. "The truth is, we are fast being 'fed up' on the New Deal," said a Georgia county leader. From Maryland came a denunciation of several White House measures which "are plunging us deeper into the depression."

The poll was taken by Joseph Leib, Washington writer.

Think Tydings Will Win.

Of five leaders in Maryland all say Senator Tydings will win against Representative David J. Lewis, a New Dealer. Four say they are personally for him while the fifth refrains from stating a personal preference.

The five were A. P. White, Wicomico County; John K. Barkley, Cecil County; Norman M. Shannahan, Talbot County; A. W. Brumbaugh, Carolina County, and John L. Riley, Worcester County.

Said Mr. Burkley: "The people know that Maryland is ably represented and in Senator Tydings have a man who does his own thinking."

Oppose Court Bill.

Mr. Riley said: "We are for Senator Tydings 100 per cent. . . . The people are bitterly opposed to the court bill, the reorganization bill, the wage-hour bill, the unbalanced budget, the increase in taxes, the unsettled attitude toward business and a host of other things which they think are plunging us deeper into the depression."

Twelve out of 13 chairmen in Georgia predicted that Senator George will be renominated in the primary September 6, and announced support for him. Although a New Deal candidate, United States District Attorney Lawrence A. Camp is in the race, reputedly at the personal request of President Roosevelt, only one of the county chairmen participating in the prophesies holds that Mr. Camp has "a fair chance" of being nominated.

Smith Speaks Out.

The 12 chairmen were H. J. Rowe, Clarke County; E. P. Johnston, Bibb County; W. E. Sirains, Ware County; David S. Atkinson, Chatham County; James A. Fort, Sumter County; Drew W. Paulk, Ben Hill County; Frank S. Burney, Burke County; L. S. Parrish, Berrien County; Quimby Melton, Spalding County; H. M. Oakley, Barrow County; H. Price, jr., Wilinson County, and R. E. Dismukes, Muscogee County. F. S. Harrell, Lowndes County, was the one who thought Mr. Camp has a fair chance of winning.

Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, the veteran "Cotton Ed," who wants no "piece of coat-tais," gets the support and the victory predictions of seven out of the ten county chairmen in his State replying to the poll. Of the other three one makes no commitment but points out that Senator Smith has always carried his county. Another thinks it is an even race between Senator Smith and Gov. Olin D. Johnston, 100 per cent New Dealer, who announced his candidacy from the White House steps after a talk with the President. The third predicts that State Senator Edgar A. Brown, also a New Dealer, will win the nomination. This prophet is Mr. Brown himself, chairman of Barnwell County.

Speaking for Senator Smith were C. V. Verner, Greenville County; H. K. Purdy, Jasper County, and J. L. Sherard, Anderson County. Others predicting Smith's victory were Luther K. Brice, Spartansburg County; R. M. Carmichael, Dillon County; Edward H. Ninestein, Oconee County, and H. G. Osteen, Sumter County.

Frank H. Barnwell, of Florence County, held that Smith and Johnston will run close.

Robots in Balloons Will Replace Men As Weather Scouts

The Army, Navy and Weather Bureau are to turn over to robots work human fliers have been doing for years.

Beginning July 1, the Weather Bureau will send aloft balloons to make weather observations at heights up to 11 miles. An ingenious mechanism will report temperature and humidity from the balloons to apparatus on the ground.

The Navy started sending up the balloons June 1 at Anacostia Naval Air Station and has received funds from Congress for similar activities with the fleet. The Army will put the robots to work at Patterson Field, Ohio, and Barksdale Field, La. The Weather Bureau will operate balloons at Oklahoma City; Oakland, Calif; Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.; Nashville; Omaha, and Fargo, N. Dak. They already have been employed at Boston and Burbank, Calif.

Maryland Girl Saves Picnicker From Drowning

Annapolis, Md., June 21 (AP).—Louis Wood, of Whitemarsh, Prince Georges County, today owed his life to Miss Thelma Louise Jones, 18, of Eastport.

Miss Jones, a graduate of the Annapolis High School this month, pulled Wood out of 15 feet of water Sunday afternoon at the Knights of Columbus picnic at the Priest farm.

The rescue was the second made by Miss Jones. On June 14, 1934, while a student at St. Mary's Catholic School, she rescued Miss Victoria DiMaggio at the same beach.

Bob Burns Says—

I have found that the bigger the artist, the more simple and down-to-earth he is, but some people seem to think that an artist or a poet has his head in the clouds all the time.

I know one artist who painted a famous picture of a strong man choking a huge boa-constrictor and he called it "Hercules Strangles the Serpent." The picture made such a hit that a bunch of art lovers went to the artist and asked him what inspired him to paint such a masterpiece. The artist says, "Well, my kid gave me the idea when he got tangled up with the hose on the vacuum cleaner!"

PrincipalLauds 368 Graduates At Roosevelt

High School Seniors Win Praise as 50 Average Over 92 Percent.

Before the 368 graduates received their diplomas, Miss May P Bradshaw, principal, announced that 50 members of the class had averages above 92 per cent, and 102 had averages above 85 per cent. She also announced that Miss Lillian Barbara Kolbey, valedictorian, was one of three with perfect records.

Presiding at the exercises was Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools. He introduced the Rev. Gould Wickey, general secretary, Council of Church Boards of Education and father of a graduating daughter, who gave the invocation. He also introduced Mrs. Mary Sherman Resh who awarded the diplomas after the class was presented by assistant principals Mrs. D. I. Huff and C. E. Bish.

The class marched into the stadium to music by the high school band. A selection was played by a brass quartet of Charles Mitchell, Homer Uhland, Jack Morales and Merton Harmel.

Swedish Housing Expert Urges Rental Subsidies

Senator Gunnar Myrdal, Swedish housing expert, told United States housing officials yesterday the Government should make direct subsidies to heads of low-income families to help pay rentals.

Sweden has found, the visitor said, that helping large families obtain better homes is a national investment in future citizens. The government there, he added, pays 30 per cent of the rent for poor families with three children, 40 per cent where there are four children, and a maximum of 50 per cent.

'Bank' Proposed For Eyes of Dead To Benefit Living

Philadelphia, June 21 (U.P.).—Establishment of an "eye bank" to which dying persons could bequeath their eyes for use in sight restoring operations was proposed today as a new weapon in surgery's war on sightlessness.

A "bank" operated in a manner similar to that now used to store human blood for transfusions was proposed by Dr. Louis Lehrfeld of the eye section of the Philadelphia County Medical Society. Its establishment, he said, is the only hope for restoration of sight to many persons doomed to permanent blindness because of a shortage of eyes for use in transplantations.

New License Plates.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 21.—New West Virginia automobile licenses became valid for the first time yesterday, although the old ones do not expire until June 30 at midnight.

Charles Mourhess Dies; Roads Official

Charles A. Mourhess, 49, assistant chief of the division of control in the Bureau of Public Roads, died yesterday in Sibley Hospital. He had been ill only several days.

A native of Andover, N. Y., Mourhess joined the Government service in 1910. He was a lieutenant in the Engineering Corps during the World War.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at Hysong's undertaking establishment, followed by burial in Arlington Cemetery.

District Woman Hurt In 50-Foot Fall in Car

Mrs. Edward Sanford, 1705 P street northwest, was injured late yesterday when the automobile she was driving left the highway just south of Upper Marlboro, Md., and plunged 50 feet to the bed of the Western Branch of the Patuxtent River.

She received a deep cut on the right arm. Mrs. Sanford told Prince Georges County police she was forced from the road by an automobile coming toward her.

Unemployed Carpenter Pronounced a Suicide

Charles De Long, 44, unemployed carpenter, was found dead of a bullet wound yesterday in a garage at 260 Daniel street, Colmar Manor, Md. Acting Coroner Henry O'Neil issued a certificate of suicide.

Children Applaud Snow White As Played Against Blackboard

Opening before an audience as cold as the blackboard which served as the background for their production, the Buckley-Sinclair-Richards version of Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" closed to cheers of second, third and fourth graders gathered in Mrs. M. L. Trice's third grade classroom at the Phoebe Hearst School, Thirty-seventh and Quebec streets northwest.

Cloak room comment revealed a decided liking for the play which employed the Orson Welles technique and the veterans of many classroom plays were lavish in their praise of the wedding scene ending that the third grade play writing team tacked on to the original Disney version.

Because their version of Cinderella which they had presented at Christmas time had been such a success, Mrs. Trice had granted Barbara Buckley, 3724 Windom place; Jo-Anne Richards, 4321 Thirty-seventh street, and Claire Sinclair, 3707 Windom place, permission to write, direct and present their own version of the motion picture.

The trio rehearsed for two weeks in Jo-Anne's front yard. Richard Chapman, a classmate, intruded on their first rehearsal, they revealed, and as a compromise he was made property man and given the part as Prince Charming's horse. The well used in the Wishing Well scene was made by Claire's mother. They had seen the picture twice and knew the songs and lines. They created their own ending, a wedding scene in which Prince Charming was married to Snow White.

Also taking part were Martha Smoot, Sally Hammet, Patricia MacCutcheon, and Gwennith Bunting.
